Extent of his cooperation to be determined

Sentencing of former trustee Valenza delayed to May 16

Sentencing of former Wheeling trustee Michael Valenza has been delayed until May 16 so the U. S. Attorney's Office can determine the extent of Valenza's cooperation with government prosecutors.

Valenza last month pleaded guilty to charges of conspiring with Building Director William Bieber to extort furniture from Wickes, Inc. The guilty plea came after the prosecutors agreed to drop a second charge of extortion against Valenza.

At that time, Assistant U.S. Atty. Steven Kadison said Valenza would be a witness for the government "if necessary."

"We told the judge we had an agreement with him to make his cooperation known at the time of sentencing," Kadison said. Sentencing was originally scheduled for Tuesday.

ASSISTANT U. S. Atty. Howard Stone said Tuesday his office has not yet determined how much Valenza is willing to cooperate with the government.

"One of the probation officer's functions is to determine the degree of cooperation and candor of the witness," Stone said. "We haven't evaluated the extent to which he is going to cooperate."

Many times the courts will reduce the sentence of persons who agree to plead guilty to a lesser charge and then provide the government with information.

The delay in sentencing means that at least two trials resulting from indictments against Valenza and five others will be under way before Valenza next appears in court.

STONE, HOWEVER, said the delay is not related to the trials and that sentencing is not dependent on Valenza's participation as a government witness in those trials. "It has nothing to do with the trials," he said.

He also said the delay had nothing to do with the continuing investigation into official corruption in Wheeling. The Jan. 31 indictments resulted from a year-long probe into alleged shakedown of Wheeling developers and businesses.

"We have to talk to him and we haven't talked to him," Stone said. "It's just a matter of fitting him in."

According to the present schedule, Valenza will be sentenced four days before Bieber is to stand trial on the same charges. Valenza admitted that he conspired with Bieber in 1971 to extort furniture from Wickes. Bieber has pleaded innocent to that charge and charges of extortion and perjury.

The conspiracy charge carries a maximum penalty of 20 years imprisonment and a $10,000 fine.

Village loses $28,400 with operation of bus

by LYNN ASINOFF

It cost the village about $2.92 for each passenger who rode the Wheeling village bus during 1973.

A year-end report prepared by the village shows that it cost about $33,000 to operate the bus, which brought in only about $4,600 income. The village had to cover the remaining $28,400 in expenses.

These figures do not include the cost of purchasing both the village bus and the shuttle bus which transported 9,735 passengers last year. Including the payments made on those purchases in 1973, the total cost of running the bus was about $41,000.

VILLAGE MGR. George Passolt, however, said the figures are somewhat meaningless this year. "This is the first time I've really come up with a cost per passenger," he said. "To me it's kind of a meaningless figure. For three-quarters of the year we were operating with one bus, which was not an efficient operation."

The number of persons using the village bus declined steadily after the first two months of operation, hitting a low point of less than 500 per month last summer. When the village purchased a shuttle bus and revamped its service, the number began to increase immediately.

As a result, Passolt said the cost per passenger does not accurately reflect the increase in riders gained through the shuttle bus. He said operating figures will probably mean more next year, when the study will reflect the impact of the shuttle bus.

"Naturally, the first year of operation you do expect to lose money," Passolt said. "I think it certainly appears that we are starting to go in the right direction."

THE MANAGER said he sees the village bus as a three year pilot program. He said that after three years the village will have had a chance to establish the bus and will have more substantial studies on which to base any decision.

"I also think we just have to wait until we get right up to the point where we start to peak off on our population figure," Passolt said. He said he expects ridership to increase as more people move into the new village townhouse and apartment projects.

Members of the village board, however, indicated that they want statistics on when and where the bus is used in an effort to operate the bus more efficiently.

Trustee Don Jackson said that if the bus is not used during the midday period, perhaps the service should be reduced or changed into a dial-a-bus operation. "It's busy in the morning and in the evening, but I wonder if we are driving around all day with nobody on it," he said.

Trustee William Hein, however, said that a dial-a-bus operation would cost more to operate because of the expense of a dispatcher and radio equipment.

Passolt will begin keeping records of dropoff points in addition to the current records of pickups. The information will be given to the village board for further study.

Interim head for building dept. named

Bob Kaminsky has been named acting director of the Wheeling building department while William Bieber is on leave waiting to stand trial in U. S. District Court.

Kaminsky, an electrical inspector, will receive a $150-a-month raise in salary for assuming the additional responsibilities. Bieber is continuing to draw his $21,500-a-year salary while on leave from the village.

The building department has been operating under the leadership of Village Mgr. George Passolt since Bieber was granted a leave of absence Feb. 6. Bieber requested the leave with pay after being indicted by a federal grand jury for alleged extortion, conspiracy to commit extortion, perjury and filing a false income tax return.

PASSOLT SAID HE delayed choosing a temporary replacement for Bieber until he became better acquainted with building department employees. "At first I wasn't that close with the men back there to know who was best qualified," he said.

The manager said, however, he could not have continued "to carry that extra duty all the time." Passolt also serves as zoning administrator, village treasurer and director of planning.

According to Passolt, the temporary promotion was made from within the department because an outsider would not be familiar with the village. "I think I'd rather somebody who knows the village and the problems, familiar with our codes and so forth," he said.

The appointment is effective until charges against Bieber are resolved. Passolt said that if Bieber is unable to return to the village, there will be a thorough review of all applicants for the building director's position.

KAMINSKY JOINED the village on Jan. 5, 1971, as a member of the water department. He moved to the building department as an electrical inspector in September, 1971. Previously, Kaminsky worked as an electrician in private construction.

Passolt said his decision to appoint Kaminsky was "based on my best judgment as to who could best handle the position." Kaminsky is not the senior member of the building department, according to Passolt.

Kaminsky told The Herald he does not expect Bieber's problems to influence his job. "I've got a job here, and I'm going to do it to the best of my ability," he said. "You get problems and you just have to face up to them. I'm familiar with some of the problems."

Despite his new responsibilities, Kaminsky said he expects to continue working in the field as an electrical inspector.

Just ask the 'Superchicks'

Omni-House is not just for 'bad' youths

by JILL BETTNER

"The Superchicks" are a group of 12 eighth-grade girls at London Junior High School in Wheeling who are trying to spread the word that Omni-House: Youth Services Bureau is not just for "bad kids."

No drug addicts, runaways or juvenile delinquents, the girls are a bunch of average teen-agers interested in having fun with a little help from the Wheeling counseling agency.

"The Superchicks" is one of 22 outreach groups organized by Omni-House at London, Cooper and Holmes junior high schools in Dist. 21, MacArthur Junior High School, Prospect Heights Dist. 23, Wheeling and Hersey high schools.

THE GIRLS are concerned that Omni-House has the mistaken reputation as being nothing more than a sort of halfway house for kids in trouble.

"Parents think it's only for drug addicts and kids with problems and stuff and that all they do over there is sit around and smoke dope, but that's not true," said Pam Keating. "This group gives us something to do and we go places and meet different people."

"The Superchicks" meet at lunch each Monday to plan activities for weekends. They have had several parties, gone on shopping trips, bowling and ice skating. One member of the group, Sherry Thornton, has written a play comparing school life in the '50s to the '70s entitled "Now and Then," to be produced next month.

Other activities in the works include a spaghetti dinner for a group of favorite teachers, a camping trip to Wisconsin and fund-raising projects for Omni-House.

A staff member from Omni-House supervises the activities of the outreach groups, but the rules of the organization are established by the members themselves.

LOIS BROLL, Omni-House counselor, who works with The Superchicks, described the groups as "self-determining." Instead of having adults impose limits on the group, the girls decide themselves what they want to do and how to do it. Part of the goal of Omni-House in setting up the groups is to give the students a chance to learn responsibility, she said.

Several members of the group agree that they get to do a lot of things they wouldn't otherwise have the opportunity to do without Omni-House. "It's sort of like a 'Y' group of something. There isn't anything else like it here," one Superchick said.

Besides enjoying the group as a sort of social club, the girls say getting together gives them a chance to share ideas and discuss common problems.

"We've gotten really close," one girl said. "Sometimes I think parents think all we're interested in is smoking grass and there's all kind of lovemaking going on in the corners, but that's crazy, man! We just like to do things and get out of the house and that's all it is."

School calendar to be changed

The Dist. 23 School Board is expected to approve several changes in the 1973-74 calendar at its meeting tonight. The board will convene at 7:30 p.m. at the administration building, 700 N. Schoenbeck Rd., Prospect Heights.

Among items to be changed in the calendar are the Memorial Day holiday from May 27 to May 30 and a change in the day for graduation ceremonies from June 11 to June 12.

The board also will consider a request from the Northwest Educational Cooperative for $702 in forward funding to develop Sunrise Lake Camp. The money will count toward the cost of sending district children to the camp this summer.

The board will also vote on its share of the cost for the landscaping and building programs at Kirk Center. Dist. 23 will pay $1,116 of the total cost of $79,747.

STEPPING OUT with batons held high are Susan Missing, 9, and instructor Donna Hieber at the Wheeling Park District's baton classes.

Silas Jayne seeks release from jail

Silas Jayne, who is serving a six to 20-year prison sentence for conspiring to murder his brother, George, Tuesday filed a petition in U.S. District Court asking that he be released on bail pending appeal.

Jayne said he has been a "model prisoner" since his conviction last May and now suffers from "poor health and a heart ailment."

He said he is appealing his conviction but now fears he may die in prison before that appeal is reviewed.

George Jayne, a wealthy horseman, was killed by a bullet fired from a high-powered rifle in October, 1970, while playing cards in the basement of his suburban Inverness home.

Senior housing site picked

Six lots in the immediate downtown area of Arlington Heights have been selected as a new site for a senior citizens housing project.

Selected by village officials for the building are parcels between Miner and Wing streets in Arlington Heights, near the train station and downtown shopping. The site has been tentatively approved by village officials, the Cook County Housing Authority and the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development.

A six-story, 119-unit apartment building is planned for the site.

School heads receive raises

The Board of Education of Elk Grove Township Dist. 59 has given administrators of the school district an across-the-board 5 per cent raise effective July 1. The move, in what is believed to be a compromise gesture, includes a raise for school Supt. James Ervitt. Ervitt is involved in a controversy with the principals of the district's schools and with some parents in the district.

Memorial service for Dr. King

A special memorial service in honor of the Rev. Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. will be held at 8 p.m. Thursday, the sixth anniversary of the black leader's assassination.

The public is invited to attend the short service at Community Presbyterian Church, 407 N. Main St., Mount Prospect. The film "From Memphis to Montgomery," the story of Dr. King's life, will be shown at the church via television. The show airs at 8 p.m. Thursday on Channel 9.

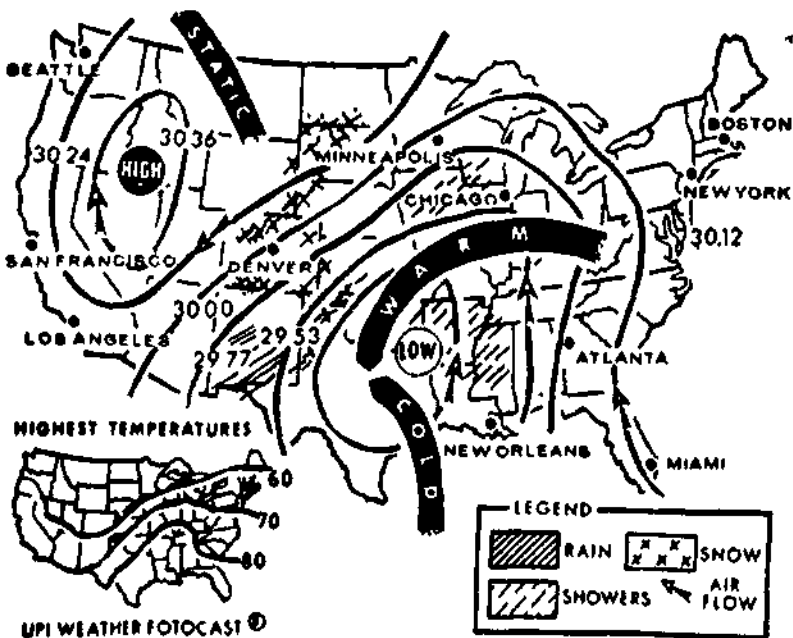

The memorial service is being sponsored by the Suburban chapter of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference.

Truck driver crackdown?

Those speeding trucks whose drivers have been avoiding state police by conversing on their citizen's band radios are in for trouble in Illinois.

State Police Supt. Dwight E. Pitman said he has ordered a crackdown on those drivers — including having his troopers listen in on trucker's conversations to second guess them. Pitman said any driver who uses his radio to circumvent the state speed limits deserves to have his own radio used against him.

Auto sales tax refund wait continues

Persons still waiting for a partial refund of sales taxes paid on cars in late 1971 still have a little wait ahead of them, state Revenue Director Robert Alphin said yesterday. #### Many tavern owners cheat state: Berz

State Liquor Control Commission Chairman Michael Berz said yesterday tavern owners in many parts of Illinois have been cheating the state by purchasing liquor illegally and failing to pay taxes on it. He announced citations against 213 liquor license holders in 17 counties who allegedly have failed to pay $750,000 in state taxes.

Largest manhunt ever in 'Frisco

Under the code name "operation Zebra" police in San Francisco mounted the largest manhunt in the city's history for a gunman who shot down two Salvation Army cadets in an apparent revival of a series of random killings of whites by blacks, police said. Since November, 11 persons have been killed in seemingly motiveless attacks. Charles Barca, chief of inspectors, said he believed all 11 were connected.

Move to bring campaign issue to vote

Senate backers of the controversial bill to pay for federal election campaigns with tax dollars, stymied by a filibuster against it, yesterday moved to shut off debate and bring the measure to a vote. A formal motion to invoke cloture — or impose the Senate's gag rule — was filed by Democratic Leader Mike Mansfield and 21 other senators.

Eye farmer, consumer beef price spread

The spread between prices farmers get for cattle and prices consumers pay widened to a new record last month, but since has been narrowed by sharp drops in retail costs, an agriculture Department spokesman reported yesterday. Also, Rep. Paul Findley, R-Ill., said cattle prices on the farm plunged by 22 cents a pound from last year's record highs, while retail prices came down only 6 cents a pound.

Indict 5 on arms smuggling charges

A federal grand jury in Washington yesterday returned a 23-count indictment against five persons, including three Americans, on charges of conspiring to smuggle arms to the Irish Republican Army. The defendants were accused of conspiring to defraud the U.S. government by illegally purchasing 138 AR15 rifles, a type similar to the M16s used by American forces in Vietnam.

Boyle again linked to Yablonski killings

A convicted killer yesterday again linked W. A. "Tony" Boyle to the 1968 slaying of Joseph Yablonski, and said dynamite, poison and finally guns were considered for the assassination of the United Mine Workers union reform candidate. Paul Gilly, convicted for the slayings of Yablonski, his wife and daughter twice identified Boyle as a conspirator.

'Favored nation' status for China?

Calling on Congress to follow President Nixon's initiative in opening relations with China, Senate Democratic Leader Mike Mansfield said yesterday he will shortly introduce legislation to grant China "most favored nation" trade status. The measure would put China on an equal tariff basis with America's trading partners in the West . . . a status now denied all Communist countries except Poland and Yugoslavia.

France single-handedly blocked yesterday the latest attempt by the European Common Market countries to lay new lines of consultation to the United States. Despite hours of debate, foreign ministers of nine nations failed to agree on the issue, which the Nixon administration has put at the top of the transatlantic agenda. They postponed it until April 20.

France's Pompidou is dead

PARIS (UPI) — Georges Pompidou, who inherited from Gen. Charles de Gaulle the presidency of France and a determination to recreate the country's glory, died Tuesday of an undisclosed ailment. He was 62.

For many months, Pompidou's health had been of concern to Frenchmen. He himself had declared, however, "My health is my affair."

Unofficially, French spokesmen attributed the puffiness of Pompidou's face to cortisone which he took to relieve painful arthritis. Others, however, speculated that he suffered from multiple myeloma, a disease of the bone marrow. Cortisone also is used for this disease.

A medical bulletin signed by Prof. Jean Vignatou, presidential physician, said "President Pompidou died today April 2." No official cause of death was immediately given.

Pompidou died at his private residence on Quai de Beethune in the shadow of the Notre Dame cathedral. All lights were put out in the apartment where heavy curtains were drawn and a lone policeman beat the sidewalk in front of the stonewall mansion.

Immediately upon the announcement of the death, officials informed Alain Pöher, 64, president of the senate, that he would be interim president under the constitution until the election of a new chief executive. Pöher served in a similar capacity in 1969 when de Gaulle resigned.

The larger tricolor flag on the Elysee palace was hauled down, and radio stations played mournful music.

The first persons to be informed were Premier Pierre Messmer and Foreign Minister Michel Jobert. Officials said Messmer immediately took over the duties of supreme commander of the armed forces and guardian of the key to France's nuclear force developed by de Gaulle.

Pompidou's death left the Gaullist coalition without an heir apparent to the presidency. It also came politically at a crucial time in France, two days before the scheduled opening of the National Assembly session where the ruling Gaullists faced a major challenge from the Socialist and Communist opposition on the government's economic policies.

Earlier Tuesday, Elysee palace officials said they could offer no explanation for Pompidou's newest spell of bad health. Medical bulletins published sparingly by the palace since his first indisposition a year ago spoke cryptically of fatigue, influenza or, on the latest occasion Feb. 21, of a painful recurrent disorder later described as hemorrhoids.

Pompidou Tuesday had canceled all official duties indefinitely because of what an official presidential palace announcement said was "his health condition."

Donald Nixon tells his Vesco role

WASHINGTON (UPI) — In Watergate-related developments Tuesday:

• President Nixon's brother testified that a lawyer for financier Robert L. Vesco asked him to warn the President in 1972 that Vesco's secret $200,000 campaign contribution might be exposed.

• Confessed political saboteur Donald Segretti testified he distributed phony letters in 1972 accusing Democratic presidential hopefuls Henry Jackson, Hubert Humphrey and Shirley Chisholm of sexual misconduct or mental problems.

• Watergate prosecutors said they have not received "all relevant material" from President Nixon as the White House claims, and will issue further subpoenas if they must to get needed evidence.

F. Donald Nixon Sr., 59, was the first member of Nixon's family to testify in any of the current trials or investigations of alleged wrongdoing by Nixon Administration officials.

He said he refused to transmit the warning to his brother but suggested the Vesco lawyer get in touch with former Attorney General John N. Mitchell.

"I said there is no way I can do this," Donald Nixon told the federal court conspiracy trial of Mitchell and former Commerce Secretary Maurice H. Stans. "It's been my policy ever since my brother has been in politics never to use that office for any purpose of mine or anyone I work for."

A federal jury heard Segretti testify he sent to Dwight L. Chapin, Nixon's former appointments secretary on trial for lying to a Watergate grand jury, copies of virtually everything involved in his dirty tricks campaign against the Democrats.

He acknowledged distribution of the bogus letters, which charged, among other things, that Sen. Jackson had fathered an illegitimate child when he was in high school; that Sen. Humphrey was involved in an auto crash with a "known call girl" in his car; and that Mrs. Chisholm, a congresswoman from New York, had been confined in a mental institution in 1961 and 1962.

"No sir, none of those facts are true," Segretti told chief government prosecutor Richard Davis when asked about the charges in the letters.

Segretti was the first witness in the trial. Chapin was indicted for lying in telling the grand jury he knew nothing about Segretti's activities.

Meanwhile, within hours after White House spokesmen told reporters that President Nixon had turned over "all relevant material" to Watergate prosecutors, the prosecutor's office issued a strongly-worded statement declaring "a number" of requests for evidence still are outstanding.

"If there is noncompliance," the statement read, "subpoenas will be issued in accordance with the agreement between the President and the special prosecutor that such matters should be submitted to the court."

Queen Elizabeth 2: at least she floats

NEW YORK (UPI) — The Queen Elizabeth 2, second largest luxury liner in the world and probably first in misfortune, gave up trying to start its engines far out in the Atlantic Tuesday and told its 1,630 passengers they would be transferred to another ship.

Ignominiously adrift 270 miles southwest of Bermuda since early Monday, the Queen's boiler failure was the latest indignity in a long string of bomb hoaxes, stowaways, late sailings and hijack scares which have plagued the pride of Cunard Steamship Line Ltd. since she was launched in 1967.

The 963-foot liner was in no danger but unable to move under her own power since her three boilers conked out, hours after the $72 million liner sailed from New York on a Caribbean cruise.

Her passengers, after a night of dancing and drinks on the house, were told they would be transferred to the Norwegian cruise ship Sea Venture at dawn today and taken to Bermuda. Two chartered 747 jumbo jetliners will be waiting Thursday to fly them back to New York.

Cunard said fares of at least $1 million would be refunded.

Two tug boats were sent to tow the 65,863-ton liner to Bermuda if the boilers cannot be repaired. Cunard said there was a chance at least one of the huge boilers might be put into service, allowing the Queen to limp into port.

In London, Cunard chairman Victor Matthews said the boilers were knocked out by heavy seepage of fuel oil from a fractured feeder pipe.

Emergency power was used to operate some lights and air conditioning as the passengers awaited the rescue ship.

Availability of gasoline is up

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Gasoline availability continued its upward trend of the past four weeks, the American Automobile Association said Tuesday.

Spot checks with 6,258 service stations in all states but Alaska showed generally improving conditions everywhere.

But "out of fuel" signs at service stations increased to 5 per cent nationwide from 3 per cent one week ago, the AAA said.

"However, this week's survey reveals that fewer stations are limiting amounts customers may purchase in a single stop at the pumps; more stations are open Sundays and after noon on Saturdays; a greater percentage of stations are pumping fuel after 7 p.m. weekdays; and fewer stations are closed by noon on weekdays," the organization said.

The AAA said the best overall fuel conditions in the country appear to be in the mountain states.

Offer new U.S. insurance plan

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., and Rep. Wilbur D. Mills, D-Ark., proposed Tuesday a sweeping national health insurance plan to cover every American against medical costs regardless of their income or their need.

The bill, described by Mills as a "compilation" of the many different health bills offered this year, is similar to a health bill sponsored by the administration and is a significant rollback from a broader, more expensive measure proposed earlier by Kennedy.

Kennedy and Mills estimated the total cost of their program at about $40 billion annually, about $8 billion of which represents additional costs above present spending but about the same as President Nixon's health proposals.

The plan would pay for hospital services with no limit on the amount or the length of coverage; for physicians' services in the home or elsewhere with no dollar limit; and for other medical services subject to an annual deductible of $150.

Message: Hearst release to be revealed

• A breakthrough in the Patricia Hearst kidnapping case appeared certain yesterday as a message from the Symbionese Liberation Army was delivered to a bi-weekly underground newspaper, The Phoenix. The message said the time and place of her release would be revealed in 72 hours. The message arrived at about the time the Hearst Corp. was revealing that $4 million in escrow for continuation of the Hearst food ransom program would be withdrawn if Patricia was not released in 30 days . . . Despite rumors in Mexico that an official of the U. S. consulate in Hermosillo might have connived in his own disappearance, a State Department spokesman said "we are operating on the presumption" that John Patterson — who disappeared March 22 — was abducted . . . In Argentina, businessman Carlos Sosa — the 18th person kidnapped in the country this year — was found shot to death the day after his family paid half the $100,000 ransom demanded by his abductors.

• Spiro Agnew was elsewhere Tuesday, as defense attorneys fought to keep his license to practice law in arguments before Maryland's Court of Appeals. The state bar association repeated its call for disbarment on grounds that the former vice president violated his public trust, while his lawyers appealed for only temporary suspension. A decision is expected in about three weeks.

• Admitted to the Louisiana bar in 1937 even though he had no law degree, and named the nation's outstanding attorney general in 1963, Jack P. F. Germlin had another significant day Tuesday. He was released from federal prison at Eglin Air Force Base, Fla., after serving 15 months on a perjury conviction involving his role with a scandal-ridden financial institution.

Often controversial, he pushed the idea that the church had to be involved in politics and social issues, desegregated the city's Catholic school system, helped open a city park to blacks, took part in anti-war and civil rights demonstrations and addressed the congregations of other faiths.

Ex-racing board chief a Barrington Hills trustee

MacArthur won't be on RTA board

Former Illinois Racing Board chairman Alexander MacArthur probably will not be a candidate for a suburban post on the Regional Transportation Authority board because he is a municipal official.

MacArthur was out of town on business when his name was mentioned last week as a choice for the RTA board, to represent the outlying five counties. He told The Herald Monday he would not resign his post as trustee of the Village of Barrington Hills. "My obligation is to finish one job before taking another," he said of his four-year term that began in 1973.

The RTA bill specifically says board appointees cannot be "a member of the board of directors or trustees or an employee of any transportation agency, or be an employee of the State of Illinois or any department or agency thereof, or of any unit of local government or receive any compensation from any elected or appointed office under the Constitution and laws of Illinois."

MACARTHUR SAID he was opposed to the RTA referendum and voted "no" on it because an appointed board with that much power could be considered taxation without representation. He said his experience with the Racing Board has led him to believe such authority should be vested in elected officials who are answerable to their public.

"As a private citizen, I should hope that (RTA) board would be representative," he said. "Right now the people out here (McHenry County) think it's the biggest ripoff of all time."

MacArthur said he has little experience in public transportation, and he thinks there are better people to be appointed. He said he hopes the RTA can be a workable agency that will give some service to the taxpayers outside Chicago.

MacArthur is also chairman of the Sheriff's Merit Commission of McHenry County, and he said the local interests are much closer to his heart.

OTHER McHENRY County residents who are being considered for the RTA board are Robert Fuchs, mayor of Cary; Raymond Clemens, mayor of Marengo and member of the Northeastern Illinois Planning Commission; Alfred S. Collins, Republican candidate for the McHenry County Board (3rd District) and employee of Chicago and North Western Ry., and Conrad Floeter, county board member who did not win renomination for one of three available seats in the March 19 primary election.

Chairmen of Lake, Will, DuPage, Kane and McHenry counties are scheduled to meet at 4:30 a.m. Thursday in Wheaton to discuss the RTA appointments. McHenry County Chairman Walter Dean said Monday that he would prefer the appointments are not announced until the last minute. The RTA board members must be appointed within 28 days after the Illinois Board of Elections announces the results of the referendum. The announcement is expected Friday.

Some mortgages here will require flood insurance

The purchase of federally subsidized flood insurance has become a requirement for mortgage loans in some areas of the Northwest suburbs under a federal regulation that went into effect on March 2.

The insurance, available from most local insurance agents, must now be bought by owners of homes that lie in "special flood hazard areas" before those homes can be mortgaged by federally regulated banks and savings and loan associations.

Maps outlining special flood hazard areas, as defined by the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development, have been prepared for Arlington Heights, Des Plaines, Elk Grove Village, Mount Prospect, Palatine, Rolling Meadows and Wheeling.

Maps for Buffalo Grove, Hoffman Estates and Schaumburg are being prepared and should be available by July.

In addition, more detailed hydrological studies of the 10 communities are planned to upgrade the current maps. Hydrological study maps are already completed for Des Plaines and for Palatine.

THE NEW requirement necessitates purchase of the insurance for any new loan or modification of an existing loan on property designated as part of the special flood hazard area on the maps.

The requirement for purchase of the insurance applies not only to federally-insured loans, but also to conventional financing according to Paul Downing, a senior vice president and secretary of Uptown Federal Savings and Loan Assn. of Chicago.

Downing explained the new requirement means a financial institution cannot grant a loan unless the insurance is purchased by the homeowner.

Copies of the maps delineating areas of local communities where the mortgage flood insurance requirement is in effect may be seen at local lending institutions or copies can be obtained by contacting State Farm Insurance Co. of Bloomington, Ill.

IN ADDITION to the residents buying the flood insurance because of the new mortgage requirement, an increasing number of Northwest suburbanites are also buying the insurance just for their own protection.

As of December, 1973 a total of 3,500 policies had been sold throughout Illinois, according to Ann Duker of the Illinois Department of Local Governmental Affairs.

Totals as of that date for local communities included 238 policies sold in Arlington Heights, 13 in Buffalo Grove, 58 in Des Plaines, 17 in Elk Grove Village, 14 in Hoffman Estates, 92 in Mount Prospect, 99 in Palatine, 14 in Schaumburg, 13 in Rolling Meadows and 26 in Wheeling.

HOWEVER, THE state total for policies sold had risen to 6,800 at the end of March, Mrs. Duker said, indicating that local totals may be higher now.

Mrs. Duker explained that discrepancies in current maps, which exclude many flood prone areas from the mortgage requirement will be corrected as more detailed maps are made for each community. The current maps are based on information from the U.S. Soil Conservation Service and on U.S. Geological Survey flood plain maps, she said.

Cost for the flood insurance under the federally subsidized program is a flat annual rate of 25 cents for each $100 of coverage on property damage and 35 cents for each $100 coverage on home contents.

Total cost at maximum coverage would be $122.50.

IN SOME communities, including only the Village of Palatine locally, additional insurance on both the structure of the home and the contents can be purchased. Rates for additional insurance in Palatine are 35 cents per $100 coverage on the structure and 45 cents per $100 coverage on the contents.

Each policy has a $200 deductible clause (or 2 per cent of the amount of loss, whichever is greater) that applies to both building and contents coverage.

Federal flood insurance is also available for multiple-family residential developments, businesses, municipal buildings, churches, hotels and motels.

Village board wrapup

Environmental board expanded

The Wheeling Environmental Commission has been expanded from three to five members in order to increase the number of people helping to draft the new village environmental codes.

Commission chairman William Rogers requested the expansion, saying that the group had too much work for three people.

Trustee Al Lang said he expects new appointments to the commission in "the very near future." The board has already interviewed two applicants, and has not decided whether more interviews should be conducted before the appointments are made.

Current commission members include Rogers, Robert Kingsbury and William Laytin. The commission has indicated that new appointments should help provide a variety of professional interests useful in preparing the new codes.

Rezoning denied

The Wheeling Village Board has rejected a request to rezone a residential home at 201 S. Wolf Rd. for a doctor's office.

Several Prospect Heights residents from the area were at the meeting to object to the rezoning. During the zoning hearings they testified that the neighborhood is primarily residential and would be hurt by bringing a business zoning to the area.

Property owner Ed Smetana, however, was not present to argue his case before the village board. The trustees last week continued the matter so that Smetana could prepare his case.

The zoning board recommended denying the zoning request because Smetana's home could not meet setback requirements for an office building. The village board voted unanimously to uphold the zoning board recommendations.

Terms expire soon

The village is beginning to do its homework in preparation for the expiration of the terms of several village commissioners.

Trustee Al Lang has asked that commissioners whose terms will expire June 30 be asked if they wish to serve again. He also asked that all commissions submit an attendance report to help the board evaluate the work of those commissioners.

Lang asked that the information be compiled by May 1 so he can prepare for any new appointments that may be necessary.

Objections to project filed

The Wheeling Village Board has voted to file objections to a proposed 480-unit housing development and commercial project proposed for 43 acres near Schoenbeck and Palatine roads in unincorporated Wheeling Township.

Village Atty. Paul Hamer said the objections would only have an effect on the Cook County Zoning Board of Appeals decision, and would not have any impact on the county board's vote.

Hamer said Arlington Heights, the closest municipality to the project, is the only village that could have affected the county board decision. He noted, however, Arlington Heights was not represented at the zoning hearings, and, therefore, could not object.

Also objecting to the project proposed by Comsite Properties, Inc. are the Prospect Heights Improvement Assn., School Dist. 23 and the River Trails Park District.

There is a school-park designation on the property, and McDonald Creek runs through the site.

One kidnaping suspect declared illegal immigrant

One of two men charged with Sunday's alleged kidnapping near Wheeling has been declared an illegal immigrant to the United States. Illinois State Police said Tuesday. The accused pair allegedly abducted two North Shore teen-agers at knifepoint from the Twin Drive-In, 1010 S. Milwaukee Ave.

Jose Luis Freyre Ruiz, 21, is illegally in this country, police said. The determination was made by U. S. Immigration authorities who have been called in on the case. The other man arrested was Fernando Del Vega Ibarra, 18. Both men are reportedly from the Wheeling area.

ONE OF THE two victims of the alleged kidnapping, Kathleen Manella, 18, remained in good condition yesterday at a local hospital. A spokeswoman for the hospital said Miss Manella had facial lacerations.

Miss Manella was injured in an automobile accident which occurred after Ruiz and Ibarra allegedly commandeered the auto Miss Manella and a companion, David McEachron, were in.

It was the accident, on River Road just south of Hintz Road, which led to the immediate arrest of one of the two suspects and the arrest of the other several hours later.

The incident began about 1 a.m. Sunday. Ruiz and Ibarra are both being held in Cook County Jail with bond set at $50,000 for each man. They are to appear April 15 in the Mount Prospect branch of Cook County Circuit Court on charges of kidnapping, aggravated assault, unlawful use of a weapon and auto theft.

Police still are withholding addresses, the hospital location of the injured girl and exactly how many people were involved in the case because they "are continuing the investigation."

You're welcome . . . but next time could you bring your trash a li-t-t-le closer to the dump?

Weber grills have become a hot item

by BETTY LEE

Years ago backyard chefs battled with billowing smoke and temperamental flames just to cook a couple of hamburgers on the charcoal grill.

While they struggled with the barbecue, a Chicago sheet metal worker stumbled into a discovery. He made a kettle out of the steel, took it home and began grilling his meals on it. He made several for his neighbors soon after.

More than 25 years later, the Weber-Stephen Product Co. in Arlington Heights is now producing the most popular and most expensive barbecue grills in the country. It has gained so much success that employees there have forgotten the name of the kettle grill inventor, aside from the fact that his last name obviously was Weber. "His first name? I don't know his first name . . . was it Joe?"

"This is a closely knit family operation," said Fred Hohenhurst as he sat in a wood paneled office. Hohenhurst is the editor of the company newsletter which publishes letters from Weber grill owners and personality sketches of employees.

NOT FAR FROM the office building at 100 N. Hickory, Arlington Heights is a manufacturing plant where the kettles travel across assembly lines in black, yellow, red and copper colors. "It originally came in black," said Hohenhurst, "but people wanted it in colors."

Be it black or any other color, the Weber grill has become a status symbol among backyard chefs. It is expensive — the "Imperial Sequoia" model with a redwood wagon is list priced at $199.95. The least expensive is a small "Smokey Joe" for $19.95. This model, they say, is ideal for picnics, camping or as a second unit to a larger kettle.

Even with less expensive model, the spending can go high by buying accessories for the kettle grill. There are $25 wok pans for oriental cooking, assorted grills and racks, special barbecue tools, shish kabob spears, special sponges, pans and other accessories.

"It is a high priced prestige item," said Ed Schaper, vice president of sales. He added that people are buying them despite their expense because the company is experiencing its most productive year in sales.

THE MANUFACTURERS admit they don't know what goes on inside a Weber grill when something is cooking, but the kettle is used with a cover, thus working more like an oven than a regular flat grill, but retaining a barbecue flavor.

The black 22½-inch charcoal model is the most popular model, said Hohenhurst. "It is porcelainized steel. You can't wear out the grill and it can't rust," he said as if he was reading from one of the company catalogs.

Bread, pizza, brownies as well as a good size turkey can be cooked on the Weber kettle. "Anything you can cook in the oven you can cook on this grill," Hohenhurst said.

A special hardcover recipe book which comes with each kettle even gives a recipe for a whole roast pig for those who want an authentic luau.

THE KETTLES COME in electric and gas models for those who don't want to bother with a lot of matches and charcoal. "We were forced into making an electric one because of competition," said Hohenhurst.

Although there are sales representatives throughout the country and in Europe, the majority of the sales are in the Midwest, said Schaper.

"Here is where all the effort is," Schaper said. The grills can be bought at any big department or hardware stores in the area, he said. Company personnel go to the shopping centers and demonstrate the Weber line of products.

When the company wants to push their product, its resident cook, Betty Hughes, cooks up a storm for clients. She tests and invents recipes for the Weber cookbook.

Officials there are keeping a tight lip on how many grills they produce and what their sales are. Only a few know in order to protect the company from imitators.

"There have been imitators, but we have found we outlast them," said Schaper. "It's hard to keep a patent. Someone can change a thing here and there and the product becomes something different. But we're ahead of them."

THE STATUS SYMBOL of backyard chefs is the Weber kettle grill. Its manufacturer, the Weber-Stephens Product Co., Arlington Heights, calls it "a high-priced prestige item." Top of the line model costs $199.95.

Herald opinion

Education not a matter of degrees

Sometimes it's amazing how important a scrap of paper can be to a group of educators.

Last week a scrap of paper — a Ph.D. degree, but nonetheless a scrap of paper — sparked a controversy over whether Schaumburg Twp Elementary Dist. 54 superintendent Wayne Schaible should obtain that degree from a non-accredited university.

The real issue, however, is not whether Schaible should obtain the degree from Walden University in Naples, Fla., a four-year institution currently seeking accreditation.

Rather, the issue is the school board's insistence that Schaible obtain the degree, which reflects a mentality which too often places paper on a higher scale than performance.

Schaible is working towards the degree from Walden because that was the "most expedient" way of meeting pressure from the school board to obtain the degree. Schaible was not required to take a two-year sabbatical leave, as is customary for attendance at most universities; he attended a summer session at Walden and is working on the dissertation project (a film) in the Northwest suburbs, with the guidance of Walden advisers in the area.

Accreditation of Walden was unimportant to Schaible and to the school board because Schaible did not need the degree to become certified, for he's already certified as an administrator. Through the program the board was kept aware of Schaible's involvement, according to board members.

The Dist. 54 board clearly regarded this degree as a mark of prestige for a capable superintendent presiding over one of the fastest growing school districts in Illinois. The board could have given Schaible a two-year leave of absence to obtain a degree, but the board approved the quickest possible route, so the district would not be without the man for two years.

Now we don't oppose graduate degrees for school superintendents, but we do oppose the kind of thinking which insists a strong educator is only a strong educator when he has a string of letters after his last name.

Wayne Schaible has proved himself a strong educator. His board's insistence that he have a Ph.D. after his name — merely as an act of prestige for the district, and not necessarily as a mark of learning — is irrelevant to his contribution to Dist. 54.

Youth bureaus doing job?

by GRANT DILLMAN

WASHINGTON — Back in 1967, the President's Commission on Law Enforcement recommended creation of neighborhood youth service bureaus to help steer young people away from crime and help rehabilitate those who strayed.

The Department of Health, Education and Welfare subsequently reported in a 1972 study that 155 such bureaus were receiving federal money and that in nine out of 10 cases it came from the Law Enforcement Assistance Administration (LEAA).

Now the General Accounting Office (GAO), which acts as a fiscal watchdog for Congress, has made a study of three youth bureaus to see if LEAA got its money's worth. It concluded that the lack of uniform standards made it impossible to say whether the concept has been successful.

But an optimist, at least, might find grounds for hope.

The GAO examined the Youth East-side Services in Bellevue, Wash.; the Youth Services Bureau in Portland, Ore., and the Project Youth Opportunity in St. Louis.

The bureaus coordinate community youth services, provide services not otherwise available and try to persuade law enforcement agencies to refer young delinquents to the bureaus rather than prosecute them in juvenile court.

The Bellevue youth bureau, which received $206,922 in the three years ending in June, 1973, had 10 staff members and about 150 volunteers. Working out of an old house, they operated a 24-hour crisis phone, job and counseling centers, a foster care program, parent education programs and a "flying squad" to provide on-the-scene help to youthful drug users and others. About 20 per cent of the young people using the bureau had committed serious crimes.

While lacking overall guidelines to measure Bellevue's performance, GAO said indications were it "may have had a positive impact." In the two years starting in 1970, when the project got its first grant, juvenile arrests dropped to 27 per cent of all arrests compared with 34 per cent in the previous four years.

It said this was even more significant than bare figures would indicate because the city's juvenile population steadily increased compared with the adult population between 1965 and 1972.

In Portland, GAO found the youth bureau there served 623 youths over a 13-month period, of whom 179 "had had some contact with the court." Further checks showed that 26 of these got into trouble again, or less than 4 per cent of the total youths served.

GAO said it was hard to determine if contact with the bureau kept the number that small. But it conceded "the project may well be having a positive impact."

The St. Louis study showed that 52 of 1,674 youths contacted by the bureau there over a two-year period later wound up in juvenile court while 109 had been in trouble before and did not repeat.

A consultant who made a random study of 125 of the youths found that 36 believed the center had influenced them to stay out of trouble, 40 didn't know whether they had been helped, 15 thought they had not been helped, 20 said they didn't really participate and 14 didn't answer.

GAO concluded it lacked sufficient data to say whether the government was getting a fair return on its money. But who can say whether it might not have cost the government even more if the youths who went straight had become hardened criminals and wound up with long prison terms? (UPI)

Press talks hurt Nixon?

by CLARK R. MOLLENHOFF

WASHINGTON — With all of its admitted inadequacies, the Presidential press conference may provide the House Judiciary Committee with a vital ingredient for the impeachment of President Nixon on grounds of obstruction of justice.

Despite Nixon's vague and inconsistent answers, the transcript of the Presidential press conference at least pins the President down to a general line on his Watergate defense.

Of particular importance to House Judiciary Committee members and staff lawyers as the case against the President emerges is that they have some concept of what the President's likely defense will be.

With delivery of the so-called "Jaworski documents" to Special Counsel John Doar the Judiciary Committee has the evidence in hand to establish a prima facie case that President Nixon was a knowing party to obstruction of justice in the Watergate matter.

The broad charge of conspiracy to obstruct justice against seven of Nixon's top aides was the subject of the indictment on March 1. The only additional evidence needed was proof of at least one overt act by Nixon indicating guilty knowledge of any one of the illegal acts in the Watergate cover-up.

The "Jaworski documents" are 19 White House tapes and about 700 other documents delivered to Special Prosecutor Leon Jaworski under a court order from U.S. District Judge John J. Sirica. They formed the basis for the federal grand jury indictment of the seven Nixon associates.

The documents also were the basis for a special federal grand jury report to Judge Sirica involving Nixon's role in the Watergate cover-up. Jaworski believed this report couldn't be made a part of the criminal indictment because a president can't be charged with crime until after he has been impeached.

Since Nixon rejected a request that he come before the grand jury to explain his role, he is not locked into a sworn defense posture.

Although comments the President has made in various press conferences weren't under oath, they were made with affirmation to the American people and to the Congress that they represented a true and correct version of what transpired in the Watergate situation.

Members of the House Judiciary Committee, the full House of Representatives and the Senate can give their own weight to any false or inaccurate statements the President made to the American people.

For certainly, any knowing misrepresentation of material facts on the Watergate cover-up could be considered grounds for impeachment along with the evidence of substantive federal crimes of perjury, misprision and obstruction of justice.

The Senate Select Watergate Committee, in pleadings in federal court approved by all seven members, contended even without the White House tapes they had made a prima facie case of presidential involvement in criminal acts. This was based on the well-corroborated testimony of former White House Counsel John W. Dean III.

In asking for nine White House tapes and related documents, the Watergate Committee said:

"If Dean be believed, the President may be guilty of several crimes, including obstruction of a criminal investigation, misprision of a felony, constant to the key issue of whether Dean was telling the truth.

Under questioning by the press, Nixon has commented generally on these conversations on a number of occasions even as he has fought in the federal courts to bar the Senate and special prosecutor from hearing the tapes he says will prove he is innocent.

Recently, the President has taken the lead in selling the legal thesis that it would have been both legal and proper for his reelection committee officials to pay legal fees and support money for the Watergate burglars.

Nixon has declared on several occasions that the payments would be a criminal obstruction of justice only if it was known to have been for the purpose of silencing the seven men who were initially indicted in connection with the Watergate burglary and bugging.

Nixon's comments are in line with the defense posture of his former top aides, H. R. (Bob) Haldeman and John D. Ehrlichman. The two have admitted a role in approving the payments but contend they believed it was a "humanitarian" act of creating a defense fund to support their families with no thought of "silencing" them.

Both have likened the contribution of more than $400,000 of Nixon political money to the Watergate burglars to the contributions to defense funds by the supporters of such radicals as Angela Davis and the Berrigan brothers.

Nixon's avoidance of a serious admission against his own interest is on the same fine line as his claim that on March 21, 1973, he heard only "an allegation" that "hush money" was paid to keep the Watergate burglars silent rather than that he "learned" of such illegal acts from John Dean.

If the President is not directly involved in the crimes of his subordinates, he is displaying an incredible naivete or an amazing lack of sensitivity on relatively simple questions of legal ethics.

By what stretch of imagination are we to believe that Richard Nixon, lawyer and experienced congressional investigator, doesn't know the difference between an unsubstantiated allegation and the admissions against interest by one of the co-conspirators in the Watergate cover-up?

Even though the Presidential press conference is a poor forum for getting the full truth, it does present the President with some of the crucial questions involving his responsibility and exposes his explanations to scrutiny on questions of fact, law and ethics.

spiracy to commit an offense or to defraud the United States and unlawfully influencing a witness."

While the Senate Watergate Committee hasn't yet obtained the White House tapes, those same tapes have been delivered to Jaworski and now to the House Judiciary Committee.

It was after reviewing those tapes, including the key Nixon-Dean conversation on March 21, 1973, that Jaworski went into open court and said he had no reason for disbelieving anything John Dean had said in any forum.

He indicated Dean may have mistakenly indicated that certain conversations with Nixon took place on March 13, 1973, instead of on March 21, 1973. But Jaworski said the mistakes were not impor-

letters to the editor

You may recall that I wrote to the Herald on January 19 clarifying certain of Rep. Schlickman's comments regarding the labor provisions of the RTA bill.

To my surprise, you published my letter in full, in your January 31 issue. I commented on my surprise to Rep. Schlickman when I had occasion to meet him a few days later.

It might interest you to know that two other suburban newspapers that I see regularly (Oak Leaves and Trib-Area III), also printed Rep. Schlickman's comments on the labor provisions of the bill, but failed to print my letter of clarification to them.

With only one side of a particular point such as this being publicized, it is understandable why the public remained confused on this and several other points involving the complex RTA bill.

This letter is to belatedly congratulate and thank you for your action in presenting both sides of this point, for your readers' consideration.

They can't locate an adoption

To Mr. Dittmer and his letter of February 26:

I'm one of those who are going to agree 100 per cent with your letter.

My husband and I have been married 15 years now and have not been blessed with children, either our own or adoptive. There has been nothing the doctors can do for me, so I have tried for three years now to adopt. We have tried doctors and several agencies with no success.

I do not deny that there are millions of unwanted children because of overpopulation, financial responsibility, physical or mental health reasons and maybe some reasons I'm not aware of for such abortions.

Sure, maybe it's easier to put away before you have, but what about the millions of people with terminal illness, of which I won't go into. Can you pull the plug on your own?

I call the Illinois State Adoption Board every four months, like I do to my doctors and other agencies, trying to find that child that needs a home. We have a home and we want to fill it and it has been in vain since abortions.

I'm trying in every way to adopt the unwanted. Maybe we wouldn't be the best parents in the world, but we want to try.

Mrs. M. Sweigert

PS We spay and neuter our pets to control overpopulation of animals, how about thinking ahead and save all the abortion problems? Unless, of course, you would like to give up that abortion to a waiting home.

RTA 'studied carefully'

Dear Rep. Eugene Schlickman, R-Arlington Heights:

I am writing you at the request of the Board of the Arlington Heights - Mount Prospect Area League of Women Voters.

During a recently televised debate between you and George Ranney Jr., you were heard to make the assertion that the League of Women Voters of Illinois decided to support the proposed RTA bill without having read or studied this particular piece of legislation. We regret that you were clearly misinformed on this important point.

Careful study of the bill was undertaken prior to the state board's decision to give approval to the referendum in the March 19 election.

Although we realize that on occasion during the heat of debate misstatements can come out, we feel that we must call attention to the fact that your information here was incorrect.

One of the main reasons, if not the principal reason, for the League's reputation of long standing for factual, objective and well-considered appraisals of issues is that we conduct careful studies and take into consideration a wide range of attitudes and opinions before finally taking a stand as an organization.

The case of the RTA legislation is no exception.

We sincerely hope that now the RTA has been approved by the voters we can turn our attention to making sure the implementation brings beneficial results to the entire six-county area.

Can you really afford to get sick?

by DAVID HENDIN
First of two parts

NEW YORK — Today's crises are of energy, economics and ethics in high office.

Yet there is another crisis, one possibly even more important to John and Jane Doe, Americans.

This crisis has been longer in coming. Millions of us face its tragedies daily. Still, this crisis too often seems to be relegated to a back burner.

It is the health care crisis.

We paid a national health care tab of $94.1 billion in fiscal 1973, up 11 per cent from the year before. The average family of four sent $1,764 worth of checks, cash or money orders to doctors, hospitals, pharmacists and health insurers.

But more families than ever have their lives crushed by the catastrophic costs of almost any significant illness. Consumers find themselves getting fewer services for more money.

What is the answer?

Today — unlike a few years ago — almost everyone agrees or at least accepts the fact that some kind of National Health Insurance Plan has become a necessity. But here agreement begins and ends. No less than a dozen bills have been proposed in the House and Senate. Six of them are noteworthy because of their sponsors, supporters or scope, but only three of these are considered likely to receive serious consideration by the Congress.

Here are nutshell accounts of the three bills.

THE CATASTROPHIC illness insurance, co-sponsored by Senators Russell Long, D-La., and Abraham Ribicoff, D-Conn., is probably the most limited approach to change. The bill is based on the assumption that private health insurance is adequate for most health needs. It would provide federal funds to pay for medical care for illnesses that have a catastrophic financial impact on the individual.

The plan would provide 75 per cent coverage after 60 days in the hospital and after the individual satisfied the deductible of $2,000 in medical bills.

The Long-Ribicoff plan is basically of three parts:

- Federal catastrophic illness insurance to be financed by a new .3 per cent Social Security Tax on employers and employees.

- An assistance program for low-income groups, which would replace Medicaid with a uniform nationwide benefit package.

- A voluntary health insurance plan designed to encourage insurance carriers to offer comprehensive coverage for less-than-catastrophic medical and hospital costs.

THE SECOND major bill is the Nixon administration's National Health Insurance Plan. This would basically keep health insurance in the hands of the 900 or so firms that now deliver it. The administration bill is, in this and other respects, similar to proposals of both the Health Insurance Assn. and the American Medical Assn.

Under the Nixon plan, individuals would pay part of both insurance premiums and actual health bills, according to income. Complete preventive health care would be given only to children up to age 6; limited preventive care would go to those between 7 and 13. Federal Medicare funds would assist the poor and elderly. Participation in the plan would be mandatory for employers, who would be paying 65 to 75 per cent of their employees' premiums, but voluntary for the employee. Funds could also be diverted to a Health Maintenance Organization, or prepaid health group, of the employee's choice.

A legislative strong point of the administration bill is the fact that Rep. Wilbur Mills, D-Ark., is listed as a co-sponsor. This is significant, if a bit deceptive.

Since Mills' name appears as a co-sponsor "by request" of the President, he has consented to let his name appear, but he has not committed himself outright to support it. One thing is certain, by allowing his name to be used, Mills has indicated that he will try hard to keep control of the bill within the authority of his influential Ways and Means Committee.

The Nixon bill would cost the federal government $5.9 billion in new outlays, and $1 billion beyond the present $3 billion states now contribute to personal health care.

MORE COSTLY in terms of federal money is the Health Security Program (HSP) co-sponsored by Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., and Rep. Martha Griffiths, D-Mich.

By far the most ambitious health insurance proposal before Congress, HSP will call for between $35 and $50 billion in federal funds. Kennedy, however, contends this great price difference between his and the administration's bill is a false issue since it simply boils down to whether the individual pays out of his pocket or is taxed by the government.

The Kennedy-Griffiths bill would set up a totally new public health insurance system to supply comprehensive health insurance to all United States residents. It would necessitate reforms throughout the entire health care system.

Kennedy started guiding this bill through the halls of Congress before any of its cousins, and it has 22 co-sponsors as well as strong support from the Teamsters, AFL-CIO and United Auto Workers.

Participation in the Kennedy plan would be compulsory to all, and it would be financed by increased Social Security taxes and general revenues of the federal government. The individual would not pay directly for either his health premiums or health bills covered by insurance. Medicaid would cover services for the poor and elderly not covered under HSP, and Medicare would be discontinued.

Proper Estimates

by Ed Landwehr

Servicing firms and professional people get raked over the coals every so often. TV servicers, auto repairers, plumbers, watch repairers, etc., and now some critic says that six million teeth are extracted unnecessarily every year. This is not only rough on toothless patients but must be expensive for the tooth fairy.

The service situation is making us a nation of "do-it-yourselfers" because labor costs are high in all fields. But some servicers must have sophisticated instruments and know-how, and electronics is one of these.

That is why Landwehr's Home Appliances will give you accurate cost estimates and explain fully what must be done to make your set efficient again. When you phone 255-0700 for services you won't end-up with a surprise king-sized bill. Our customers will attest to this policy.

Look in at 1000 W. Northwest Hwy., Arlington Heights, and see some fine displays of nationally-advertised color TVs. And remember, we service what we sell.

Mass transit to be probed at hearings

The Chicago Transit Authority will be the subject of a hearing conducted Friday by several U.S. Representatives as part of a nationwide series of hearings on the condition of mass transit in the country.

Chairman of the group examining the CTA and listening to testimony from public transportation experts in the metropolitan area is Rep. John C. Kluczynski, D-Ill.

Hearings will begin at 9 a.m. Friday in the Chicago City Council chambers, with testimony from Mayor Richard Daley, Cook County Board Pres. George Dunne, CTA Chairman Milton Pkarsky, Langhorne Bond, secretary of the Illinois Department of Transportation, and other mass transit experts from Milwaukee, Minneapolis, Minn., St. Louis, all of the Chicago commuter railroads and two Chicago area mass transit districts.

The hearings are designed to let congressmen "see, taste and feel the problems being experienced by the residents of our larger cities," said Rep. John A. Blatnik, D-Minn.

Consumer groups on Oakton panel

Representatives of organizations involved in consumer protection will be featured as panel members for the Green Turnip Community Survival Symposium on "Consumerism and Survival" at Oakton Community College Thursday at 8 p.m.

Jackie Kendall, a member of the consumer committee of the Citizens Action Program of Chicago and formerly a member of the Consumer Advisory Board of the Federal Trade Commission, and Howard Kaufman, chief of the Consumer Fraud and Protection Division of the Illinois Attorney General's Office, will discuss consumerism. Nancy Lawler, instructor in economics at Oakton Community College, will also be a panel member. Keith Hiner, coordinator of the Green Turnip program at Oakton, will serve as moderator.

The Green Turnip Community Survival programs serve as forums for problems centering on pollution, over-population, declining natural resources, the urban crisis, and the quality of life itself.

Offered as a community service by Oakton Community College in conjunction with MONACEP, the programs are open to the public. Admission is free.

Skyway has team strength top to bottom in baseball

Skyway Conference baseball is rapidly gaining respectability, and this year's contenders will do nothing to tarnish that rugged image.

Elgin coach Mike Peterson, a former three-year assistant at the University of Illinois, is high on the Skyway. "This is one of the very top JC conferences for baseball, and it is getting stronger," he said.

Triton, the 1973 Region IV champions and Midwest JC runnerups, are strong once again and, with Waubensee, appear to be the class of the league. Warrior coach Bob Symonds, however, agrees with the consensus of his colleagues that the race will be tight.

Reflecting the general feeling of a tougher conference from top to bottom, is Mayfair mentor Harry Tholen: "I feel we will have a good club, but there are also seven other good clubs in this league. On any given day any team can beat anyone else."

On paper, Waubensee, Mayfair, and Lake County appear as the likeliest roadblocks in Triton's path. But, as it is said, "it is anyone's ball game" at this point.

A pre-season look at each of the squads in order of their 1973 finish follows with their conference records in parentheses:

TRITON (11-2)

Pitching is the ingredient feared most by Triton's foes. With Tim Verpaele, Rich Swanson, and Tom Doyle, even coach Symonds admits that he "could have the best three hurlers in the league."

Verpaele, a graduate of Immaculate Conception, was the league leader last year as he posted a 4-0 record and an ERA of 0.42. Freshman Doyle, a lefty like Verpaele, is also an I.C. product, while Swanson comes from Glenbrook North High School.

Good balance will make Triton tough to dethrone. "This year we are faster, and will be better defensively than a year ago," said Symonds.

He feels the team lacks real power, but "may hit for average as well."

Catcher Rich Rochetti of Proviso West returns and should again be among the top hitters in the conference. He batted .333 last year.

WAUBENSEE (9-4)

When Bill Prince is optimistic, it is a fact that he is issuing a warning. The Waubensee coach has included 35 victories in this year's goals for his club. He states flatly that "this should be our best baseball team ever."

The Chiefs' fortunes lean heavily on a left-handed hurler. Gary Oros, from Aurora West, was all-conference and all-state last year. He had an ERA of 0.81 as he won six and lost one. He led the league in strikeouts with 75, and he fanned 173 batsmen in all games to rank fifth nationally in that category.

Prince has 12 lettermen returning — six of whom were starters last year. Waubensee's one weakness, if they have one, is the replacement of first baseman Gus Harvell, the Skyway's 1973 MVP.

Former Aurora East star John Steib, a catcher who hit .377 in the league last year, is back. So is slugger Mark Agnew from Aurora West. Agnew led the team with an overall mark of .464. Jeff Pritchard, the state's top base stealer in 1973, will again terrorize the basepaths.

Other returnees are established hitters Jeff Miller (Aurora East), Bob Powers (Kaneland), Don Clark (Aurora West), Dan Butts (Aurora West), Mark Grams (Aurora East), Dave Flaar (Oswego), and Bill Martin (Oswego). Steve Wellington of Oswego will again see action on the mound.

If freshman Robin Roder is as aggressive on the diamond as he was on the hard court for Waubensee's basketball co-champions, he will be a newcomer to watch.

Coach Prince says his team's strong points are pitching, hitting, fielding, and experience. He just might have a point there.

LAKE COUNTY (9-5)

"We have the personnel to score runs quickly, our defense is sound, team speed is good and the pitching has the potential to keep us in the game if our offense is shut off. We should be a contender for the conference crown, but Triton and Waubensee will be the teams to beat," concedes Lancer coach Gene Hanson.

Lake County will be offensive-minded. They are led by All-American third sacker Rich Kaczmarek (Schurz) who hit .377 in the league and .404 overall last year.

Other lettermen are outfielder Joe Bartolai (Highland Park), a .308 hitter, catcher Jim Maki of Grayslake at .412 overall, and captain Rick Affolter (Grayslake) who hit .328.

All-stater Fred Shepton (Waukegan) was 6-2 on the mound last year. Workhorse reliever Jim Davila (Waukegan) is also back, as are pitchers Tony Borre (Waukegan), and Randy Schneider (Grayslake).

Transfer Gary Thomas (Zion) hit .340 for Black Hills College a year ago and will start in right field. Freshman Pete Gorsline, a standout at Warren High School, will play first base when he is not on the mound.

OAKTON (8-6)

Oakton may be in for some high-scoring games this year if Coach Rich Symonds' pre-season jitters hold true.

"Pitching is the big question mark," he said. "We must show improvement here in we are to equal last year's record."

Symonds lost four starters from his 1973 mound corps. He does feel that his club is very adequate "in hitting." Also, Oakton's defense looks stronger "with the addition of new people at the key positions."

All-conference shortstop Ken Schroeder (Maine West) will again bolster the infield.

Symonds has seven returning lettermen, but he is especially high on these three transferees: outfielder Bill Benson (Kelvyn Park), Jeff Potnie, a third baseman from Von Steuben High School and catcher Mike McDonnell (Maine East).

"If our pitching holds out, we could be in the first division," Symonds said.

MAYFAIR (7-6)

If records mean anything, then Mayfair outfielder Chris Bourjos is a class ballplayer. Bourjos, who played his high school ball at Gordon Tech, led the league last year with a sterling .451 average. He also was Skyway's top base thief and hit four home runs to earn all-conference and all-state honors.

Coach Harry Tholen has eight lettermen, but looks to a "good freshmen crop to bump or at least push the sophomores hard." He feels the key to Mayfair's success are these first-year candidates.

Low Rudolph (Mather), Gene Erickson (Prosser), Bob Turner (Sullivan) who hit .300, Bob O'Toole (Lane), Mark Frigette (Lane), Blase Faria (Sullivan), and Jim Dundee (Kennedy), are Mayfair's veterans.

Tholen claims good pitching and overall team speed. He foresees an "interesting race."

HARPER (6-8)

John Eliasik is also looking to his frosh — especially the pitchers — to key the Hawks' aspirations.

Coach Eliasik lost last season's top hurler George Pattee due to ineligibility. "We now must come up with freshmen pitchers to be contenders," he said.

Harper's top ballplayer from the 1973 squad, shortstop Mark Jesse (Cary Grove), will anchor the infield.

The Hawks' mentor is looking for outstanding seasons from first baseman Keith Steelman (Conant), Rich Luzinski an infielder/outfielder from Niles Notre Dame, both sophomores, and freshmen Lorne Crites (Elk Grove), Jim Brown (Conant), and Pat Broderick (Hersey).

McHENRY (2-11)

"We will improve on last year's record," claims coach Gus Williams. "We are simply better all-around-very strong defensively, vastly improved pitching and catching."

Williams feels his hitting must pick up, however. "We have much more depth on our pitching staff, but we just are not too deep at the plate."

Co-captains Joe Deahn (McHenry) and Frank Simon (Crown), catcher and pitcher, respectively, are expected to lead the Scots to success. His coach is especially high on Deahn, who "is strong defensively and carries a big stick."

Williams also likes basketballer Randy Blazier, a pitcher and thirdbaseman from Harvard. "Randy is the hardest worker we have. He gives us good balance," Williams said.

ELGIN (2-12)

Coach Peterson feels very uncertain about his club in this pre-season outlook. "We are adequate and won't be embarrassed, but we are having problems attracting the good quality kids to compete in this excellent conference," he said.

Elgin has unproven pitching and questionable hitting. Peterson has some outstanding performers, however, in infielder Ken Taylor who hit four home runs in the conference last year, "top-notch" shortstop Jim Juliano who has "great range and arm," and all-conference outfielder Vic Gallione who sports "an excellent throwing arm" among his attributes.

Peterson said Elgin will be strong up the middle, but will have pitchers who must play other positions.

OOMPH! Bob Racconelli of Maine East lets go of the shot in indoor track and field action. Racconelli ranks among the state's best shot-putters, but Saturday at the Oak Park Relays he could manage only a 51-foot, 4 1/2-inch effort, which placed him fourth behind winner John Sloan of Rolling Meadows. Sloan reached 59 feet, 3/4 inch, a personal high and third best in the state.

Harper hopes to battle DuPage today

"If there's no rain between now and then, we'll play two."

John Eliasik, the Harper College baseball coach, appraised his team's chances of getting in some action Wednesday on the home field against the College of DuPage.

Then Eliasik rated his squad's chances from the talent end of the business. "We look respectable," the coach said. "We wanted to get a look at all of our pitchers last week, but we only got to see two of them and they looked all right."

The Hawks had six games scheduled and five of them were cancelled due to poor weather conditions, but Thursday Eliasik watched as his boys topped Lake-land College, 5-2, in 12 innings.

"Bob Frantell got the victory," said Eliasik. "and Ken Gast started and he pitched well, too. Our defense was good for this time of year and our hitting was so-so.

"But the pitching is the most important," continued the coach. "I've got four pitchers who didn't work last week that I want to see Wednesday — Jeff Richardson, Frank Hannou, Steve Perry, and Terry Kukla."

Eliasik is in the process of firming up a starting lineup but he gave this tentative list: Kukla in left field, Greg Fink in center, Rich Luzinski and Dave Zare sharing right field and third base, Mark Jesse at shortstop, Keith Steelman at first, Pat Broderick behind the plate, and Jim Brown and Loren Crites splitting the second base chores.

The Harper nine will try to improve on last year's 6-8 Skyway Conference record. They were 17-17 overall.

If atmospheric conditions allow it, the Hawks will get under way today at 2 p.m.

Pettenuzzo swings red-hot bat for New Mexico Lobos

The University of New Mexico baseball stock has soared this spring because of the efforts of former Herald Athlete of the Year Mike Pettenuzzo.

The graduated St. Viator three-sport standout, besides contributing a full fall season in a helmet and shoulder pads as a defensive safety for the Albuquerque-based varsity football squad, is still dishing out lumps on the baseball diamond.

The talented Arlington Heights native is currently sporting a gaudy .629 batting average with four home runs and 24 runs batted in for the 7-2 Lobos.

Mike has drilled 22 hits in 35 trips including 10 doubles, two triples and four round-trippers. Four of every five of his safeties are for extra bases!

Having found a home in the third slot of the Lobo batting order, Pettenuzzo anchors right field where he boasts excellent range and a rifle throwing arm. Let's hope either the Cubs or Sox keep tabs of this potential professional.

WHILE HERSEY was basking its way into the prep basketball quarterfinals against Bloom in Champaign, Palatine's Rick Sorci was unveiling his first annual United States Open Table Hockey Tournament at the Marriott Hotel in Chicago.

"Both the turnout and the compliments we received about the tourney have given us great hopes for next year," Sorci said.

In satisfying the craving for a sports game tournament with cash prizes, Sorci received entries from as far north as Edmonton, Alberta, as far south as Memphis, as far east as Boston and as far west as Nelson, British Columbia.

Albi Gorn of New York City captured the singles division by defeating Greg Muench of Arlington Heights in the best two-of-three playoff, 2-3; 4-0 and 4-1. Chicago's Tom McMahon notched third and John Curran of Montreal, fourth.

In the doubles competition, Boston's Mark Abkowitz and Dave Feinberg — New York's reigning doubles champs over the past two years — captured the top prize from the Palatine brothers entry of Mike and Rick Sorci, 2-5, 3-1 and 4-2.

Sam Canzona of Wheeling and Marv Tennant of Chicago coupled to bring home fourth place in doubles play while Howie Hyman and Dave Goodman of Brooklyn finished in the show money.

The victory in each division was worth $500 with $200 going to the runnersup, $75 to third and $25 to fourth.

"We were shooting for 100 singles and 50 doubles," Sorci said. "We got our 100 singles and received entry fees from 40 doubles teams, so we didn't fall too short of our goals."

For his efforts in presenting the unique and refreshing tournament, P... was named "Table Hockey Year" and presented a cor plaque by tourney sponsors Coca industries and 1st String Sporting Goods.

BEFORE EVERYONE becomes engulfed in the seven-month baseball season, a fleeting, final word on high school gymnastics.

In striving for major sport recognition, there may be no other activity that demands as much physical work than a head gymnastics coach.

Before every meet, it's up to them to install the equipment in the gymnasium or fieldhouse, scrub the mats, wheel the chalk trays, flash cards and chairs for the judges out onto the floor, activate the scoreboard and teach managers the cumbersome scoring system and difficult announcing assignments.

During the meet itself, the host head coach is a supervisor, trainer, spotter and, oh yes, a coach. After the meet, the record plays backwards until the final trampoline spring is carefully in its place.

In terms of scholarships, this area has long been a college gymnastics breeding grounds. No other sport comes close to producing as many full or partial rides for its graduating seniors.

LET'S MAKE A final reminder to all area high school gymnastics coaches who are members of the National High School Gymnastics Coaches Association to nominate the boys on their teams who are eligible for High School All-American honors.

The area produced Bob Siemianowski and Scott Phillips from Elk Grove and Arlington's Geoff Reider and John Golbeck on the elite list last season, but there were several other gymnasts who met the criteria, but were not nominated by their coaches.

To become a High School Gymnastics All-American, a candidate must have five averages that meet the established requirements set down by the national committee. Two of these scores must come from tournaments involving five or more teams.

In floor exercise and trampoline, gymnasts must have five scores of 8.6 or better, on side horse, horizontal bar and rings an 8.4 and in all-around, an average of 7.8.

If a gymnast meets the above mentioned requirements and the coach is a member of the national association, he need only send a photostatic copy of the meet results along with the signature of one of the judges and his school's athletic director.

Upon verification and acceptance by the national committee, each gymnast is rewarded with a High School All-American certificate. The deadline for nominations is June 10.

Ken Singleton—valuable Expo

NEW YORK—The best looking player I've seen all spring, the one I think can maybe pass Pete Rose, Willie Stargell, Johnny Bench and Cesar Cedeño in the bone-tiring, mind-bending six-month marathon for the National League's MVP Award is Ken Singleton.

He scores a 100 in practically every department.

Condition, good; swing, better; attitude, best of all.

Ken Singleton gives you the impression this summer with him is going to be like last summer all over again, only more so, and when you stop to check his last summer's figures—103 rbi's, 23 homers and a solid .302 batting average playing in every one of the Montreal Expos' 162 games—you find yourself wondering whether he can top them.

He can.

Mostly because of that attitude of his Dave Bristol, who managed Cincinnati and Milwaukee and now is one of Gene Mauch's coaches with Montreal, says Singleton has shown him something already no other ballplayer ever has before.

"I've never seen a ballplayer who came to the park more ready, physically and mentally, to play the game every day than he did," says Bristol.

Wait a minute now. Hadn't he managed Pete Rose four seasons?

Bristol nodded.

"That's right," he said, "but Pete's in another world."

Ken Singleton, who put in two years with the Mets, diminishing some of their enthusiasm with a .235 figure before they dealt him, Tim Lincecum and Mike Jorgensen to the Expos for "Le Grand Orange" Rusty Staub in April of 1972, did such an extraordinary job last year that a lot of people went out of their way to let him know how they felt about his performance.

Tom Seaver was one.

A week or so before the season ended, after Singleton already had driven in his 100th run, Seaver made it a point of congratulating him on his tremendous season.

On the final day, Gene Mauch called Singleton into his office because he also had something he wanted to say.

"You worked on all phases of your game," he said to his strong 6-foot-4 rightfielder. "You did a tremendous job."

"I'm gonna do even more next year," answered Singleton.

His salary negotiation with Vice President-General Manager Jim Fanning during the winter was a classic.

"I spent 20 minutes extolling the virtues of Ken Singleton to him," Fanning remembers. "I told him he was the only player in the big leagues who scored 100 runs, drove in 100 runs, drew 100 walks and hit over .300. There wasn't a single negative aspect about his performance and it gave me a great deal of pleasure to tell him that."

"When I finished," Fanning smiles, "Ken looked at me and said, 'I've nothing more to say. You've said it all.'"

Singleton, needless to say, got a nice pay boost.

The Expos' husky, 26-year-old switch-hitter has been having himself a good spring with 10 rbi's, two homers and a .317 batting average. He is an exceptionally disciplined hitter who brings the ball into the strike zone before he swings and that also accounts for the number of walks he draws.

He has and feels no abrasiveness toward the Mets for letting him go after he was with them only two seasons.

"I can't really blame them," he says.

"Guys like Cleon Jones, Tommie Agee, Sham Art Shamsky and Ron Swoboda are the guys who won it for them in 1969, so they went with them. Up here, I get a chance to play every day. No questions asked. This year everybody says 'you'll have to do better.' Great. That's the way I feel. Last year I was very fortunate. I didn't have any injuries and Ron Hunt and Bob Bailey were on base quite a bit when I'd come up to hit. This year, with Willie Davis in front of me, it will mean that much more."

Ken Singleton has confidence in himself, and in the Expos' ability to win.

Earlier this spring, Expo first baseman Hal Breeden was having a minor contract dispute with the front office.

"Don't worry about it," Singleton comforted. "We're gonna get you some extra money this year."

Tips for buying new boat motors

They may still be talking about snowmobiles in the upper reaches of Wisconsin and Michigan, but spring may finally be at hand in Illinois.

The wind is blowing hard enough now to start the annual spring turnover of the lakes, which will get the shoreline waters warmed up for the spawning panfish.

Early season visitors to the northern Illinois Chain of Lakes have been rewarded with the sight of hundreds of hooded mergansers who annually stop here, canvasbacks and redheads, mallards and Canadian geese. But spring will definitely be here only after we have once again survived one wet, messy, heavy April snowfall; and when the coots come home.

Early fishermen on inland lakes, so far, have found only a few crappies in the channels of the Chain Lakes and an occasional straggler up at the shoreline.

On Lake Michigan, early frostbite anglers are catching a coho here and there. But they are having their best luck dunking night crawlers for German Brown trout. No charter boats are active yet on the big lake and most won't be until after May 1 when the U.S. Coast Guard begins its survey of weather and water conditions.

In Wisconsin, most of the activity is in the Manitowoc area where the tributary streams into the lake are teeming with rainbow trout. Best catches have been reported at the Manitowoc Rapids, Shoto and Mishicot dams and along the streams into the East and West Twin rivers and the Manitowoc River.

Further south, rainbows and browns continue to be caught in the Pike River and in the Kenosha Harbor, despite the cold, rain, snow, sleet and wind. At Port Washington, north of Milwaukee, trout to five pounds are being taken.

A few valleys have started running in the Fox River at Oshkosh and at the Winnebago Bridge, but the big run either took place under the ice, or is still to come—no one is quite certain which, yet. Fishermen in the area, however, are taking northern pike in the Wolf River at Fremont and Gill's landing.

Most of the south and southeast Wisconsin rivers and lakes are free of ice, needing only a week or so of sunshine to get the fish active.

Arlington vaulters win at Maine North

Arlington's pole vaulters were the only local winners last weekend in the Maine North Track Carnival, won by Niles West with 114 points.

Cardinals Dave Hillert, Jeff Schimmel and Bruce Wachlin combined to win the pole vault relay with jumps totaling 33 feet.

Niles West won the four-mile relay, 50-yard dash, two-mile relay, two-mile run and high jump relay en route to the team title. Other team scores were Lake Park 85, Arlington 48, Forest View 45, Rolling Meadows 35, Maine North 28, Luther North 28, Prospect 24 and St. Patrick nine.

At Beverly Lanes

Pat Greener came close to joining the Pad-dock 600 Club when she notched a 525 scratch series in the Arlington Heights Ladies Elks Women's League at Beverly Lanes. Nancy Schiller notched a 200 scratch game.

Topping the 200 mark with handicaps were Lillian Byhring (222), Nancy Schiller (230), Ester McDermott (221), Marilyn Roy (215), Pat Runlett (211), Shirley Juratschke (209), Fern Lucas (204-213), Connie Zordan (207), Pat Greener (201-220), Evelyn Withins (203), and both Beverly Smith and Helen Schramm (202). Others were Doris Kelly (200), Helen Schramm (204), Shirley Juratschke (208) and Ella Kramer (215) in last week's action.

Sportsman's notebook

by Bob Holiday

ANYTIME NOW, THE carp, buffalo and gar will begin flexing their spawning muscles as the creeks and sloughs and ditches warm up.

That means it's time to tune up the bowfishing outfits. It's one good way to get over a bad case of cabin fever.

The first thing to do with your bowfish outfit is the simplest—replace the line on the reel. In recent years, bowfishermen have switched almost completely to the close-faced spincast reels. I like the huge Zebco 808, which is mounted on a Ben Pearson bowfish rig. The reel handles the heavy line that you need and the Pearson is a superb outfit to handle and shoot.

Just make sure the barbs on the fish arrows are sharp, because in the early season, penetration is the big problem. Except for hitting them.

I've seen expert bowmen try to shoot carp in deep water and it is always interesting. They forget the refraction effect of the water is ilusive and they nearly always shoot high. If you're buying new arrows, buy only solid fiberglass or you'll have trouble nailing those big bull carp that like to lie three or four feet below the surface soaking up the sun.

BOATERS WHO ARE shopping for new motors are asking marine dealers questions they have never tried to answer before. So some research turned up some information that will help in the decision as to what and how big? A 165 horsepower stern drive engine in a large boat will consume about 10 gallons of gas per hour when operated at cruising speed. By comparison, a car that gets 15 miles to the gallon at 55 miles per hour is burning only 3.7 gallons per hour.

Further, a V-drive or inboard engine is more economical than an outboard (and more expensive) but you can't launch it. An inboard/outdrive is more economical than either one of them, but these are available in only large "cruising" boats that aren't for fishing except on Lake Michigan.

The lower the horsepower of your outboard, the lower the fuel consumption per hour, naturally. Except that an under-powered boat cannot operate in the motor's economical cruising range, so you're wasting gas. You need to power your boat as closely as possible to the "rating" on the boat's manufacturer's plate. Overpower it and you're risking sinking it. And you'll consume more gasoline in its operation.

Improper trim of a boat can create huge inefficiency and cost you gas. If the boat's bow rides high at moderate speeds, or the boat won't get up on plane quickly, you probably have your motor improperly tilted. Tilting the lower unit of the motor to the rear brings the bow down. Tilt it forward to get the bow up. Improperly loading the boat, with cargo and people, will also keep a boat out of trim and consume more-than-usual fuel.

And nothing beats an annual spring motor tune up. It costs a few dollars, but you'll be amazed at the fuel saving you'll realize over the space of one season.

Speaking generally, your boat . . . my boat, any boat, . . . will get the best gas mileage in two parts of their engine's operating range: at very low speeds, and at the minimum speed required to plane the boat smoothly. As an example: a 65 hp motor on a 17-foot boat can deliver nine miles per gallon at five miles per hour, 3.3 mpg at nine mph, 6.6 mpg at 20 mph, 7.6 mpg at 28 mph, and five mpg at 36 mph—just about top speed.

Boat speeds and fuel consumption figures will vary, of course, from boat to boat, but the fact remains that boat engines do not run efficiently at full throttle, and second, an outboard can get good mileage at a smooth planing speed providing that speed can be reached at about three-quarter throttle.

If it requires more than three-quarter throttle to plane, you are underpowered, tilted wrong, or the engine is set too low. Or you could be "propped" wrong, but your marine mechanic will have to tell you that.

Jerry West appears ready to end his super career

by IRA BERKOW

LOS ANGELES — "If you'd go into an office and see a man my age, a 35-year-old businessman, doing some of the things I do with my co-workers, you'd think he was a madman," said Jerry West recently.

"We act like kids, rasslin' and bumping a guy into a door and throwing a ball at him, and the constant riding that goes on in the locker room. You've got to have a lot of kid in you to be an athlete. And, frankly, I've loved it. I feel like I'm the luckiest fella in the world. It's been an incredible life. Incredible. But I don't feel much like a kid anymore. I feel now

I should do something more constructive with my life.

"That's why I think that this will be my last season."

Now at the end of his 14th season in the National Basketball Association, Jerry West suits up for Los Angeles Lakers games but sits on the bench. It is a strange and frustrating posture for one of the finest guards — one of the finest players, period — to ever lace on a professional sneaker.

"What hurts so much is you don't feel like you're earning your pay (about $300,000)."

West has played little this season because of a severe groin muscle pull. It causes him pain when he runs, even trots. He can, however, jump. "Yes I could shoot but I couldn't get open," he says, with a wry upturn of his thin lips.

The Lakers, champions two years ago and runners-up last season, had a struggle before making the playoffs this season. The departure of Wilt Chamberlain to San Diego in September took much of the wind out of the Lakers championship chase. West's injury deflated the team further.

"What hurts so much," said West, "is you don't feel like you're earning your pay." (Which is estimated at $300,000.)

Some of this pain is relieved in places like New York's Madison Square Garden, where West was introduced before the game and received a long, farewell standing ovation from not only the 20,000 fans, but from the Knicks players, too. West's blue eyes dampened.

"I'd like to be on my own for a while... I've had a coach telling me what to do for the last 24 years of my life."

He says he is an emotional man; he is also prideful. He says that this will probably be the last time he will ever be in a basketball uniform of any kind. He is not one, he says, to begin playing in YMCAs for the fun of it.

"I've set such high standards for myself that I couldn't enjoy playing the game on any lesser level," he said. "But I'm still very competitive. I'll play golf to satisfy that part of me, and I may go into the business of coaching, and I'll set the same high standards for myself in those areas as I did playing basketball."

He says he would like to get away from basketball entirely for a few years; in fact, he'd like to get away from work for a few years.

"I'd like to be on my own for awhile," he said. "You know, I've had a coach telling me what to do for the last 24 years of my life." He began his basketball life a skinny kid in Cabin Creek, W. Va. Later he became an All-American at the University of West Virginia. In 1959 he joined the pros.

"You begin as a kid and you stay a kid in many ways if you are a basketball player," he said. "I took the game very seriously. And the pressures were tremendous. But a lot of the enthusiasm you have to have is childlike. And then you horse around to relieve some of that pressure.

"But I sit on the bench now, and I realize that when you can't do it physically, it changes your mental outlook. You begin to see that you have to do something else with your life. Something more constructive. By that I mean, I want to use my mind. I think I have a good one. I don't want some job where I just sit and do nothing. There's more to me than that, there's more to me than Jerry West, basketball player."

West said that he has been preparing for the end for some time. "I've watched a lot of ball players come and go," he said. "And I saw a lot who never thought this athlete's life would end. I didn't want to suffer the kind of crash they did when it was over. And so I think I'm pretty well adjusted in that respect. My ego, my view of myself as a man, was never dependent on how well I played basketball.

"And I've always felt lucky. I don't know why I was never booed. Can you imagine that? Never booed. And I don't know why I've had the success I've had. I mean, take any two guys. They're built alike, look alike, and yet one guy is a better ballplayer than the other. A lot of guys thought about the game as much as I did, had as much desire, and practiced as hard — even harder. I guess someone up there was looking after me.

"And what an indescribable feeling to be cheered. How many men in their lifetimes are applauded the way an athlete is?

"I've enjoyed the camaraderie of teammates. I'll miss that a lot. But right now I feel like just going somewhere where there is no basketball and there is no coach running my life. But I'll probably miss the hell out of that, too, after about a week."

Will 'The Great Gatsby' be so great?

by VERNON SCOTT

HOLLYWOOD—David Merrick, who has managed to keep Broadway alive almost single handedly for the past decade, produced "The Great Gatsby" for the movies and is aghast at the tidal wave of publicity it has spawned.

"It's a matter of grave concern to me," he said on a trip west to discuss "Gatsby's" prospects with the celluloid scientists at Paramount.

"How does a picture live up to the advance publicity this one's had? I really haven't had that much of a part in it. I didn't want the film to be blown up too much."

A PARAMOUNT statement that the country would be "Gatsbyized" didn't set well with Merrick, producer of "Hello Dolly" and 80 other Broadway successes.

"That statement plus all the magazine covers and all the commercial product tieups could raise the hackles of the public. People are bound to expect too much of the movie."

As it stands, Merrick is in line to take the raps if "Gatsby" doesn't live up to advance ballyhoo. If it is a hit the top executives at Paramount — Bob Evans and Frank Yablans — will surely take the bows.

"I'm not interested in taking credit," said Merrick, "and I'm also not interested in ever working with Paramount again."

"We've had our squabbles. It's difficult to deal with men who haven't read any books since 'Black Beauty.'"

MERRICK IS watching everything connected with the picture. He spent more than three years putting the picture together.

"I was on the set every day during the four and a half months of principal photography," he said. "I wanted to learn all I could. Staying on the firing line is the best way. Also, I didn't trust Paramount. I didn't want them to be able to say I was derelict in my duties."

Merrick was rumored to have been dickering with 20th Century-Fox four years ago about buying the studio. He may yet become a studio owner.

"Motion Pictures have caught my eye," he said. "The camera opens up all the library shelves to stories that can never be done in the theater. The camera is a new factor to me now that films have advanced to a new state beyond the 12-year-old mind."

"Not only has the subject matter opened up, so has the method of telling a story. Movies have finally come into their own as an art form."

ALREADY A millionaire many times over, Merrick plans to scoop up some of the movie gold he has seen pouring in from the likes of "The Exorcist," "The Sting" and "The Godfather." Nothing on Broadway ever returned figures that ran into that many tens of millions.

Merrick already has a deal with 20th Century-Fox to make a movie version of his hit "Promises, Promises."

"It would be ideal to make movies without dealing with the moguls," said Merrick, oblivious of the fact he is a major mogul in his own bailiwick.

"In the theater I raised money from my friends, relatives and myself, and I gave them two tickets for opening night and that was the end of it. Things are different with the moguls. They try to run the project."

"I won't try to be an oracle about 'The Great Gatsby.' I think it will be a hit. But even if it isn't, the moguls at Paramount have already got their money back. 'Gatsby's' advance sales have already put them in the black."

Secretaries' Assn. offers $300 grant

The Park-Plaines chapter of the National Secretaries Assn. will award a $300 scholarship to a high school senior girl living in and attending school in the Northwest suburban area again this year.

There is no limit to the number of applicants from any one high school, but each girl must be planning to receive further secretarial training on a full-time basis. The scholarship may not be applied toward night school classes.

Applications are available from Louise R. Kitto, 2 E. Suffolk Dr., Arlington Heights 60004. Applications must be returned to Mrs. Kitto no later than April 13.

Students submitting applications should have their school counselor complete a confidential scholastic and personal data form required.

Applications will be evaluated by the scholarship committee of the Park-Plaines chapter. Finalists will be asked to meet with a group of three judges for personal interviews the first week of May.

The winner will be presented with a certificate of award at the June 5 annual meeting of the chapter.

For further information, contact Mrs. Kitto, chairman of the scholarship committee, at 259-5630.

School camp to expand?

The Northwest Education Cooperative is going to try to get 72 more acres of land to add to Sunrise Lake Camp in Bartlett.

The NEC governing board Saturday voted to ask State Sen. David Hegner, R-Mount Prospect, to introduce legislation to give the cooperative the 72 acres of land surrounding Herrick House. Herrick House, a facility for children under the care of the Illinois Department of Children and Family Services, is adjacent to the 10 acre camp NEC was given last spring by action of the General Assembly.

Herrick House will be closed April 15 because of state action.

Sunrise Lake Camp is now being restored by volunteers and by an architectural construction class from Forest View High School. NEC plans to open the camp this summer as a day camp for handicapped children from the Northwest suburbs. Eventually the camp will be a year-round facility.

Forest View band wins

The Forest View High School jazz band won its class in the Midwest Regional All-American High School Jazz Festival last weekend in Crown Point, Ind.

The band won the top place in its Class A against 11 other schools. The Elk Grove High School jazz band, last year's winner, placed second.

The Elk Grove band placed first in Class B competition. Because of the win, the Forest View band has been invited to a national contest in Mobile, Ala., but will not be able to attend because of a rule by the Illinois High School Association. Last year, Elk Grove students protested the rule that prohibited Elk Grove from competing in Mobile.

Special awards for soloists were given to Forest View students Greg Ferguson, Dan Jessie and Bruce Bindon.

Unexplained fainting deserves exam

The doctor says

by Dr. Laurence E. Lamb

I would like to know what "vaso-vagal reflex" means. A couple of weeks ago, after eating dinner, I started to get up from the table, and I passed out. I was out 15 to 20 minutes. My blood pressure at that time was 112/60.

I am 72 and have very good health and have never fainted before. After I came out of this fainting spell I felt as good as I ever have.

Next day I went to my doctor and he gave me a checkup and said everything was fine. My blood pressure then was 148/86, and that's what it usually is.

He said I had overeaten but I'm not a big eater. He explained this to me, but I didn't understand all of it. He said it probably wouldn't happen again, as it doesn't happen very often. Would like to know what you think.

Many people faint without it having any significance. This is particularly true in young people.

A common cause of fainting is the "vaso-vagal reflex." Through reflex mechanisms involving the vagus nerve, the blood tends to accumulate in the lower part of the body. The arteries over-dilate, and the veins fill with too much blood. When this happens there simply isn't enough blood to flow uphill to the brain. When you lie down the blood flows normally to the brain, and you recover.

The catch is what causes the reflex. In young people standing, as in parade formation, it is usually not medically important. You may remember a few years back pictures of the Air Force Academy cadets fainted out on the ground after fainting while in formation. People can have this reflex triggered from the sight of blood, a shot, or a variety of emotional stimuli.

Every unexplained faint does deserve a careful examination. In people over 50 it is more often an indication of some medical problem. Its exact nature may not be apparent at first. It can be caused from changes in the arteries in the neck or even in the brain. In rare cases it is a sign of a heart attack. About the only thing the doctor can do if the medical examination is normal is to wait and see if anything else shows up later.

I'M DOUBTFUL that your faint was simply nothing. I have made a special study of fainting problems. When I used to see the Air Force pilots and the astronauts, fainting was a big problem because it isn't a good idea to have a pilot fainting while flying jet aircraft. After seeing several hundred cases, I was impressed that fainting in the older person was not often just nothing, and, quite significantly, fainting seldom occurred in a person who was seated. The only major exceptions were those young men seeing a particularly gory movie on aircraft accidents — a film that induced a high faint rate.

I think you should go back to your doctor soon for a follow-up examination. It could be that you had gotten up too soon and were standing longer than you thought. In any case, it won't hurt to have a follow-up for a while to be sure that nothing else develops.

Strike against United Air Lines near

A 30-day cooling-off period is coming to a close and it may leave United Air Lines out in the cold.

Last minute talks are continuing between United and representatives of the airline's mechanics in Washington, D.C., this week. And if negotiations are not successful, the machinists' union is free to call a strike Saturday against the Elk Grove Township-based firm.

According to Warren Waterloo, financial secretary for the machinists Local 1487 in Des Plaines, a strike may be called Saturday at 6 p.m. Waterloo and United representatives are mum on the issue of wages. Waterloo said one of the issues involved part-time employment.

The union asked that all ramp service personnel, cleaners, fuelers and mechanics should be full-time employees. "United wants part-time people because they don't have to pay the benefits, give seniority accrual and vacation pay," he said.

THE MOST RECENT strike by members of the International Assn. of Machinists and Aerospace Workers occurred in 1966. Waterloo said. It continued for five weeks against five carriers.

"We are in negotiations with the IAM

Business today

under the auspices of the National Mediation Board in Washington," said Jim Linse, corporate representative for United's parent firm, UAL Inc. "We are hopeful that there will be a settlement."

The machinists contract expired Aug. 31, 1973. The 30-day cooling off period went into effect following the breakdown of negotiations, and the rejection of arbitration service proffered by the National Mediation Board. The machinists and United representatives decided to start talks again a "couple of weeks ago," Linse said.

THERE ARE SOME 2,500 members in Local 1487 of the machinists union. Waterloo had no estimate of how many are United employees, but he said the entire airline operation would be affected by a strike. United employs about 17,000 persons.

On a national scale, the machinists union is negotiating on behalf of some 45,000 employees in 1974. Pay packages had been settled with North Central and Frontier airlines. Delta, which employs non-union machinists, planned to follow their wage settlement. Braniff had worked out a new contract with machinists late in 1973.

Contracts to be worked out this year include United, TWA and Continental.

Uncertainty about the future of wage controls could complicate the negotiations. The authority for wage controls will expire April 30, unless legislation extends the deadline. In the interim, the Cost of Living Council has temporarily held back the North Central, Frontier and Delta agreements, pending the outcome of other settlements.

UAL reports revenues up

Maintaining momentum despite rising fuel prices and an uncertain economy is the challenge for United Air Lines and its parent firm, UAL Inc. in 1974, according to Edward Carlson, president.

In the recent UAL annual report, Carlson noted that the Elk Grove Township-based corporation achieved records in both revenues and traffic in 1973.

Financial results in the report bear out a preliminary announcement by the UAL Inc., the parent company of United and Western International Hotels, consolidated net earnings were $51,128,000, or $2.03 a share, compared with $20,376,000 or 80 cents a share in 1972. In January, UAL declared a common dividend of 12.5 cents — its first in more than 3 years.

Net earnings from airline operations totaled $48,067,000, an improvement of almost $35 million over the prior year earnings of $13,675,000.

Speakers urge development of resources

Energy conservation cannot become a substitute for the development of future energy resources, according to speakers at a recent industrial energy conference held in Oak Brook.

Addressing the "Enerconexpo '74" at the Sheraton Oak Brook Hotel, Illinois Commerce Commission chairman Marvin Lieberman and C. J. Gauthier, chairman and president of Northern Illinois Gas Co., discussed the exploration and development of resources.

Lieberman said the fuels not consumed because of industrial conservation practices can be called the "nth energy resources," adding that the problem with this "nth resource" is the high degree of uncertainty in projecting future availability of energy supplies.

Lieberman said the industrial sector of the economy is "far more capable of analyzing its energy utilization abilities than the public." Natural gas conservation in the residential sector does account for 6 to 7 per cent of estimated demand, said Lieberman. He added that energy suppliers should minimize costs.

Gauthier called for a unified national energy policy, one in which "the American energy business can know the ground rules under which it is to operate."

He said there is a need for realistic growth standards, conservation program, deregulation of newly produced natural gas prices, a change in the leasing of federal lands, tax incentives and increased expenditures for energy research and development.

Volunteers 'compassion' praised

Peace Corps story 'incomplete'

Your March 6 article on the Peace Corps based on impressions from one short-lived volunteer is incomplete and unfair reporting. I am personally acquainted with Robert Horrell, mentioned in a comment by the young man who was your source of information. My impressions, after hour long conversations with Robert Horrell when he was home on leave, made me realize our understanding of our neighbors in foreign lands has a tendency to be a constant comparison with all the goodies we are so fortunate to have here at home.

We are a wealthy and a lucky nation in spite of all the bad news from the White House. We are visitors and ambassadors in these foreign countries, but in their eyes we are the foreigners. Even our collection of derelicts on West Madison Street have more luxury than the unusually poor people of Sierra Leone! But the people of Sierra Leone have a long history and they are a proud people. They possess a richness in their lives we would like to add to our own. Yet in their lives there is a long procession of hardships and a struggle to survive.

Robert's desire to find water and deliver it by pipeline to five villages using these people's labor will give them a luxury beyond our wildest understanding. Water in Sierra Leone is badly polluted and scarce. Pure drinking water from a well deep enough to supply these poor people for generations to come is not something the people of these villages will quickly forget.

We have made some friends who will remember Americans like Robert Horrell for many years. However, if incompetence can exist in any business or office, and we all know that it does, so we can expect some "Don Murans" who may unwittingly hurt Robert's work and damage rather than improve our relations with underdeveloped nations. The purpose of the Peace Corps is to accomplish feats like Robert Horrell's without insulting the citizens of the host country.

Unfortunately for all of us, the Peace Corps has been stripped of so much of its funds by the present administration in Washington that even the pipe so badly needed for Robert's project was almost a year in arriving.

Volunteers for the Peace Corps do not come in big batches. Many have been accepted who could not adapt to the life style of Arlington Heights, let alone a country so strange and incredibly poor as is Sierra Leone. Many volunteers such as Mr. Muran are accepted presuming that a graduate of a university with a degree has acquired the intelligence and open-mindedness which is mandatory to accept the style of living in a totally strange environment.

The Peace Corps' three weeks of in-

Fence post letters to the editor

doctrination should be sufficient for university graduates! It has been found adequate for the Armed Forces in spite of much lower academic levels.

Obviously Mr. Muran was incapable of facing a life outside of mom's apple pie. And he was a poor choice to represent our country and make friends. Yet you have written a four column spread on information from a malcontent who spent only three weeks there. Robert Horrell is only one of thousands of effective Peace Corps volunteers! I believe your article does a disservice to those young Americans who have shown remarkable achievement in the service of their country while getting only half-hearted assistance from our government.

Lawrence Lamb, M.D., hit

May I take issue with one of our columnists — Lawrence Lamb, M.D.? He appears in today's paper with a column of a young non-pregnant wife who questions her capability to endure labor and childbirth. To her, it is a very severe problem that she feels she can control now in a non-pregnant state.

His answers are trite: "a problem that doesn't exist," an example. He lays blame for the fear that young women experience prior to their first birth to other women who have experienced childbirth. This is totally unfair. Granted one should always consider the source in virtually everything, but to "put-down" those persons who have personally experienced one of life's biggest events and choose to relate it to the inexperienced is another example of chauvinism. The silence that mothers used to extend to all the uninitiated women has ceased, and good riddance! Women and girls deserve honest, straight-forward answers to questions on sex, labor, delivery and any and all aftermaths before they embark on what can be a most rewarding event. By their intelligent decisions made on accurate become better women, better patients, better mothers. It is time that far more of the medical profession realize this.

Also, congratulations on having Clark Mollenhoff in your paper. His columns are definitely an asset to your paper. I wish he appeared more often.

Thank superintendent

Last Wednesday, March 6, on behalf of the Arlington Heights-Mount Prospect Area League of Women Voters, Irvana Wilks and I met with Edward Gilbert, Superintendent of Township High School Dist. 214. At that meeting we presented folders containing information on ecology to the eight district high school libraries.

This material was assembled in the process of recent environmental quality studies by the League. We expect that students will find it useful and we hope in the future to make more reference material available to schools in our area.

We want to thank Dr. Gilbert for his time and interest in meeting with us.

Police auto chase of youth criticized

A small article in the Feb. 20 Herald indicated that a 16-year-old youth had been killed while being chased by the Cook County Sheriff's police. What great crime had this child committed? Murder, rape, armed robbery? No, he had expired license plates and burned out headlights.

Granted, the boy should not have tried to run away from the police but the chase is still not justified. Why must the police endanger his and other innocent lives under such unwarranted circumstances. This isn't the first time this year that a chase has caused death. This practice must be stopped in all but the most severe cases.

We are not living in a wild police movie where a big chase is the only way to catch the criminal. The other cars on our roads aren't filled with mechanical dummies that don't get hurt. Our pedestrians walking along the way aren't stunt men that know how to jump out of the way. They are real people whose lives are threatened during a chase. Stop these

Reader's bunk

Concerning the letter in the Herald, Feb. 21, on the editorial page, by Richard Thomsen of Des Plaines.

I was amused yet kind of surprised at his panic. I hope that most people don't go around worrying about "the communists taking over." It was like listening to a real live Archie Bunker.

Reader: 'Parents responsible'

Abortion's 'inhumanity' criticized again

Through the communications media, I hear and read about the plight of children being born into an environment that will definitely be hostile toward them, or at least that is what many pro-abortion groups are saying in their defense of the Supreme Court ruling concerning abortion. Other points brought to focus by these groups are: the financial costs of unwanted children, their burden on society, the population crisis and the infringement they bear on the rights of parents.

What kind of person would terminate (or be a party to the termination of) a pregnancy? The hostile environment parents "condemn" an unwanted child to their own environment. The financial costs involved in bringing an unwanted child into the world only illustrates their selfishness and greed. I believe these parents themselves are the burden on society, not their unwanted child. If they cared about the so-called population crisis, they might think of employing birth control measures. As far as the infringement of their rights, what about infringement of the unborn child's rights? Who defends the innocent child as the doctor exterminates it unmercifully?

In a society that is definitely success and goal oriented, it seems an unwanted child is a financial burden, an inconvenience and a roadblock to achieving higher income and personal comfort. To those who are pregnant and truly cannot afford a child, many other couples who are childless would be happy to assume the financial burden and the sacrifice of a few personal comforts in order to share their love with the child through adoption. Birthright is an organization which can be of immediate help.

To those who believe in God and are pro-abortion, remember that you will have to stand before God and defend your views and actions. Will your "I could not afford a child" or "it would have caused us unnecessary hardship" be valid considering God's only son was severely persecuted, mocked, tortured, and put to death for our sins when he could have chosen a much more convenient course of action. There was a

I don't believe your article should go unchallenged, Mr. Lahey. My source of information is quite a bit better than yours. My information is from an enterprising, capable young man with an engineering degree who has lived and worked in Sierra Leone for three years — not three weeks like Mr. Muran. Furthermore, to write a negative article about the only real effort this country has made to improve its image seems to me unjustified.

I believe we are short of friends in the world and if you doubt this, our old shortage ought to convince you that "the United States" is not a popular word in the world. No thinking citizen could possibly ridicule an effort to correct this. Our Ugly American tourists, ambassadors living in social incest, our monopolistic corporations invading every country on earth has the world angered and "Ami Go Home" is written on walls and buildings everywhere in the world.

Robert Horrell would not write a letter like this. Robert's understanding of people and compassion have formulated his personality in a way which makes him incapable of being unfair. It is this part of his dedication which is responsible for his successful effort in a country many of us have never heard of.

Seeks pedestrian bridge

Dear Mr. Zettek, Elk Grove Village president:

I would like to bring to your attention a problem involving Elk Grove Village residents living east of Salt Creek, between the streets of Brookhaven Drive and Walnut Lane.

When the weather is good enough, bike riders and pedestrians like to take trips up to the stores and restaurants located on the corner of Devon Avenue and Arlington Heights Road. There are two routes in which I know of, that people may take to this destination. One, of which is the shortest for myself and people living on streets close to Devon, is to go directly west, down Devon Avenue, until you reach the stores. This route, however, presents a safety problem. Due to the four-lane expansion of this highway with its heavy traffic.

People wanting to avoid Devon and also people living close to Kennedy Boulevard, have to go west on Kennedy past the public library turning left on Brantwood, then left again on Carlisle Avenue to gain access to the street of Wasdale, which intersects Devon and brings you within 50 yards of these shops.

Obviously, the two major concerns to this problem are safety and distance. To solve both of them, I propose that you build a small bicycle and pedestrian bridge across Salt Creek at the point where Clearmont Drive dead ends on Cypress Lane and continues on across the creek, intersecting Carlisle Avenue. This would result in a safer, shorter route, to gain access to that part of the village and its stores. This would save a good half-mile traveling distance, and serve as a midpoint for people in this area to easily gain access to. Since it would not be a bridge for automobiles, its cost should be minimal. Also, with the present construction of the Salt Creek Water Retention Basin, the water in the creek should not rise far enough to affect passage on the bridge. There is also an open lot, and about 200 feet of field on each side of the creek, allowing for easy construction.

I hope you will seriously consider this proposal and let me know your view of the situation.

'Egypt made tremendous strides'

At the very time that the United States and the United Arab Republic (Egypt) were re-establishing diplomatic relations, the Fence Post printed a letter attacking Egypt by Mrs. G. Stone of Arlington Heights.

Mrs. Stone's letter was supposedly directed at the recent tragedy in Elk Grove Village, but most of her letter was an anti-Egyptian tirade. I wonder why she is so sure that Joel Daly would be robbed in Egypt, since their crime rate is lower than ours. She is amazed at the occurrence of infant deaths. Mrs. Stone, our country is unfortunately behind 12 others in combating infant mortality.

While she upholds the failure of Elk Grove Village to protect the lives of its residents, she accuses the Egyptian government of doing nothing for its citizens. This is far from being true. In fact, Egypt has made tremendous strides since she was freed from foreign domination in 1952. When Farouk (who was Albanian not Egyptian) was deposed, Egyptians had almost no medical care. Today there are thousands of doctors, nurses and clinics. In 1952, Egypt had virtually no heavy industry or power sources; today she is constantly moving ahead in these areas. In 1952, Egypt imported 90 per cent of her pharmaceuticals; the local industry is now able to supply all domestic needs and even to export. Is this evidence of a government that is doing nothing?

Her charges that the elderly are cast aside are utterly unfounded. Elderly people are revered and respected in all Arab countries. The idea of placing a relative in a nursing home to be cared for by strangers is abhorrent to the Arab soul. Family ties are strong; children are given massive doses of love, affection and the companionship of parents, grandparents, aunts and uncles. This fact may go a long way in explaining why juvenile delinquency is rare in Egypt as it is in other Arab countries.

Egypt is poor, but poverty is neither a criminal offense nor a barometer of happiness. Lashing out at other countries' problems or other people's remarks is not constructive towards resolving either our problems or theirs.

Lack of compassion in a tragic situation is inhumane. We should all take stock of our local problems, charity begins at home.

P.S. We wish Mrs. Stone well with her pregnancy and the birth of her child. We certainly hope she will never have to face a desperate situation unaided as Mrs. Pettie did.

Aldermen needed

I cannot agree with City Clerk Eleanor Rohrbach's views on reducing the size of our aldermen in the Des Plaines city council from 16 to 8. She says it would reduce the haggling that goes on.

We need two men from each ward to represent us. There are some wards where an alderman is not receptive to the views of the majority of his constituents. In these same wards, you have another alderman who listens to what his constituents have to say and votes for the people, not himself. We would not have that alternative if we had one alderman from each ward.

Thank goodness for the haggling that does go on. The days of all "yes men" on the city council are gone. It is refreshing to see that some of the senior aldermen are finally opening their mouths like some of the junior aldermen and not saying "Yes your Honor" everytime Mayor Behrel opens his mouth.

One office that I feel too much power is being wielded is the office of the city clerk. I feel Mrs. Rohrbach should stick to her own duties and not try to run city hall.

'Nothing safe from fire'

In reply to the letter, "Fire Safety Urged," I would like to comment on the following fact. I agree that fire prevention should be practiced by everyone, but no matter what precautions are taken or what we do to prevent fire, nothing is safe from fire.

We can all practice fire drills, have escape routes and meeting places outside of the home, in case of a fire. However, all of these precautions would be useless if you are not aware of the fire. This is especially true during the night-time hours when your family is asleep. We must have something that will warn us of the imminent danger of fire.

Several years ago I investigated the different types of fire detectors. I found that the self-contained unit which requires no maintenance and no outside source of power would protect my family's lives in any type of fire and at any time of day or night. This is the type of detector I have installed in my home. No one ever need die or be injured in a fire.

The U.S. Government's National Commission on Fire Prevention and Control urges all Americans to protect themselves and their families by installing approved early warning fire detectors and alarms in their homes.

Dead animals seen on Schaumburg Rd.

My reading class in school is reading a chapter called The Web of Life and we had to write a letter to some editor that had something to do with the web of life and I am writing about Schaumburg Road.

Everytime I go down Schaumburg Road I see dead animals. I would like to know if you could do something about it and, if so, will you.

Palatine attorney heads committee working on proposal

NIPC begins planning for 6-county bike path network

by KAREN BLECHA

Bicycle enthusiasts will be able to peddle to their hearts' content on a six-count-long bike trail if the dream of a group of suburban, city and county officials comes true.

A committee of the Northeastern Illinois Planning Commission (NIPC) is beginning work on a proposal for a network of bike trails linking Cook, Kane, Will, McHenry, DuPage and Lake counties. With the system, bikers would be able to ride without interruption from Will County to the Wisconsin border or from Kane County to Chicago's lakefront.

The trail system would be used for transportation to work and shopping as well as for recreation, according to Roger Bjorvik, chairman of the Recreation and Open Space Technical Advisory Committee (ROSTAC), which is working on the proposal. Bjorvik, a Palatine resident, is the attorney for the Palatine, River Trails, Wheeling, Palatine Rural and Golf-Maine park districts.

"We want to provide a place for people to ride in their leisure time. Bicycle riding is a family activity and we don't have enough of those," Bjorvik said.

Roger Bjorvik

"And with the energy crisis, in the future we will probably look more to the bicycle for transportation."

THE TRAIL network, called the Regional Trail Plan by the committee, will come from both existing and future bicycle trails. Currently, according to Bjorvik, there are less than 200 miles of bike trails in the six-county area. He would like to see several hundred more.

Major existing trails include the Illinois Prairie Path from Elmhurst to Aurora and Elgin, 17 miles of Chicago Park District bike trail along the lake front, six miles of trail in the Brookfield Zoo and a trail being constructed along the north branch of the Chicago River.

New trails could be routed on open space along Metropolitan Sanitary District (MSD) waterways, abandoned railroad right-of-ways, through Commonwealth Edison Co. rights-of-way where power lines are strung, and through parks and forest preserves.

THE ROLE OF the NIPC committee, according to Bjorvik, is to study the existing trails and available land to see where new trails would be feasible. The committee would co-ordinate efforts between communities to establish bike paths to link the towns and eventually the six counties.

If several communities wanted to get together to form a bike trail, NIPC could provide technical assistance. One of the NIPC advisers helped design the bike trails in Washington, D.C., Bjorvik said.

But Bjorvik stressed that NIPC cannot build the trails. That is up to the local communities.

"They have to construct their own trails. NIPC cannot implement, only plan," he said. "Right now people should be evidencing their interest in bicycle riding other than by buying bikes. They should take time to write a letter to their park district officials or NIPC to say they want bike trails and would use them."

BJORVIK SAID state and federal funds are available for communities that want to establish bike paths. Last week the Transportation Department announced new guidelines that would permit states to use federal money to construct bikeways outside the rights of way of federal aid highways. Previously, bike paths were funded only if they were alongside a highway.

There are several ways a town can set up trails, according to Bjorvik. One is to construct paths on open land. Another is to put up bike trail markers along existing streets so motorists will be aware of cyclists. Another is to change an existing street to a one-way street and designate special bicycle-only lanes.

THE IDEA OF linking bicycle trails is not new. Bjorvik has been working on it under the auspices of the Council of Governments, a voluntary membership group of government officials in Cook County. He spearheaded attempts two years ago to establish linking bike paths between 10 park districts in the Northwest suburbs. The park districts are Arlington Heights, Rolling Meadows, Palatine, Buffalo Grove, Wheeling, Mount Prospect, Prospect Heights, Elk Grove Village, Des Plaines and Salt Creek.

The Palatine Park District, which began construction on a 4.7-mile bike trail through Commonwealth Edison and park land, is expected to finish the project this summer. Fred Hall, park director, estimates total cost for the project at between $145,000 and $155,000.

Elk Grove Village currently has 15 miles of bicycle trail, which consists of village streets with special trail markers. The path was a joint effort between the park district and the village, which paid for the bicycle signs. Des Plaines has a similar trail.

The other park districts' bike paths are still in the planning stages.

Diabetes 'bike-a-thon' set May 5

Eddie Fendler, a juvenile diabetic from Arlington Heights, will be grand marshal in the Northwest Suburban Diabetes Bike-a-Thon on May 5.

The American Diabetes Assn. of Greater Chicago will sponsor the Bike-a-Thon to raise money for the group. Each prospective bike rider will ask as many people as he can to sponsor his ride by pledging a certain amount of money for every mile he completes. Checkpoints will be set up along each bike route so the rider can verify his mileage. After the ride, he will go back to his sponsors, collect his pledges and send the money to the association.

McDonald's Restaurants will provide orange juice along the route and a free sandwich, fries and beverage for every rider who completes 25 miles. Five John Deere bicycles are being donated by Chicago-area dealers and will be awarded to Bike-a-Thon winners in various age categories: 7-11, 11-15, 16-21, 21-30 and over 30.

Those interested in riding, sponsoring a rider or volunteering to man a checkpoint should call 943-8668.

Citizenship: some rights and restrictions

by JULIE MARTOCCIO

Dear Attorney Martoccio:

We're not young anymore so my husband keeps talking about the old country and how he wants to go there and live for the rest of his life. We're from Greece, but we were naturalized here. We worked hard for everything we got but we still don't have much money saved with things costing so much. My husband is a sick man and we have a lot of doctor bills to pay. What worries me is that we won't have our Social Security if we go there to live. That's what somebody told me.

V.G.

Dear V.G.:

If your only worry is Social Security benefits, you can relax right now. It may be confusing, but it is indeed fortunate that the laws change from time to time in order to benefit us. This is one of them. The law used to be that a naturalized citizen did lose Social Security benefits if she (or he) moved out of this country, but that law was changed in 1964.

You will not lose your Social Security benefits, but I wonder if you don't have a few other things to consider before you leave this country permanently.

IT MIGHT COST less to live in Greece, but you say your husband is in ill health and in your letter (which I had to condense) you said that he will continue to be under a doctor's care the rest of his life.

If he is or will be in need of extensive medical care and possibly hospitalization, it might be wise to find out in advance what your chances are of getting this care for your husband free of charge (or its cost) in Greece and weigh it against what you may receive here under the Medicare program.

Good luck! I hope that whatever you decide will be best for the two of you.

Dear Mrs. Martoccio:

How come our country allows commies and pinkos to travel all over the world making trouble? Seems to me they ought to keep these birds home where they can keep an eye on them. It really burns me up.

T.R.

Dear T.R.:

According to the law, a person has a legal right to a passport and to travel wherever he cares to go. The decision to restrict a person's freedom of travel to a foreign country has not been an easy one for this country to make. The Supreme Court says, "It is a constitutional liberty just as freedom of speech." The pendulum has swung from complete freedom to tight restriction and back again.

Before World War I Americans were free to travel without passports and most foreign countries did not require passports from visitors unless war was impending or if there were some kind of national emergency.

BY THE 1930s, however, Congress passed laws which made the obtaining of a passport a requirement. The State Department at the time had control over deciding who should receive one and who should not. The only reason expected from the State Department in denying a passport was whether or not it was deemed "contrary to the best interests of the U.S."

The Supreme Court changed this rule in a decision in 1964 when two American communist party leaders were permitted to obtain a passport. But since that decision, the Supreme Court backed up the State Department's right to restrict a U.S. citizen from traveling to a foreign country where it "might conceivably involve the U.S. in dangerous international incidents," and in at least one instance where a person wanted to travel to Cuba to "see what Castro is doing."

What one Supreme Court judge said, "The law of the land is what the Supreme Court says it is," seems to be true.

(Readers are invited to submit questions regarding legal problems of women and children. Attorney Martoccio's column is intended to inform and not advise. Write to her in care of Suburban Living, Paddock Publications, Box 238, Arlington Heights, Ill. 60006.)

Federal Trade Commission has a champion in Stephanie Kanwit

by MONICA WILCH PERIN

For an agency that continues to be bombarded with charges of ineffectiveness, the Federal Trade Commission has a brilliantly ardent supporter in its new Chicago regional director, Stephanie Kanwit.

But Mrs. Kanwit, one of the first women to be appointed a regional director, makes a very convincing case for the Commission.

The 39-year-old mother of two had been satisfied as an anti-trust lawyer in the Chicago law firm of Chadwell, Kayser, Ruggles, McGee and Hastings when she was asked to take the FTC post. She hadn't applied for it, and at first wasn't interested.

"I decided to take it because I was very impressed with (Commissioner Lewis A.) Engman and the staff. They're aggressive people, all young... I think the Commission is becoming much more activist."

THE FTC HAS for some time been complaining, in response to consumer criticism, that it lacked sufficient power to do its job. The Commission's efforts finally paid off last year. The Supreme Court upheld the FTC's rule-making authority as having the force of law. And Congress gave the Commission the power to obtain court injunctions against violators of the FTC act. The Commission also was handed a stiffer penalty ($10,000 instead of $5,000) to slap on violators of FTC orders.

Critics have already jumped on the Commission for not using its new powers, although, as Mrs. Kanwit points out, the FTC has indeed already brought one injunction under the new authority, which is only four months old.

"It isn't that easy," Mrs. Kanwit said. "Getting an injunction involves building a case, like a mini-trial. You have to have a tremendous amount of evidence, you have to weigh the likelihood of success, the benefit to the public... and how much harm it (an injunction) would do the defendant."

A PRELIMINARY injunction is an unusual procedure for unusual circumstances. She gave an example. A boycott agreement is made among a group of dealers, and the boycotted dealer is on the verge of going out of business, which would mean there would be no competition in that particular business. An injunction would be brought to end the boycott and save the victimized dealer's business.

An even more extraordinary measure, according to Mrs. Kanwit, is the temporary restraining order, another new power the FTC won from Congress.

"It doesn't even require giving notice to the defendant, but it would be used very infrequently — like when your neighbor's house was about to fall on yours because your neighbor was digging under it. You would just rush into court and get a temporary restraining order to stop him without wasting time to tell him first."

"BUT THE BULK of cases will still proceed in the normal way," Mrs. Kan-wit predicted, which means offenders are first given opportunity to voluntarily stop their violation by signing a "consent order" with the FTC. If no such agreement is reached, the FTC then issues a formal complaint.

Why are violators given this "first chance?" Why not penalize them right away?

"A consent order saves time," Mrs. Kanwit explained. "A complaint involves court hearings and it may take months." As for penalties, they can only be imposed after an order has been issued and violated — in effect, a second offense by the defendant.

While the more complicated cases are wending their way through the litigious process without great publicity, critics often come to the conclusion that the FTC has abandoned these issues.

FOR INSTANCE, it has been awhile since the alleged cereal oligopoly (a monopoly shared by several companies) has been in the headlines. But that case is "still alive," Mrs. Kanwit confirmed.

And there will be more anti-trust cases in the Chicago regional office if Mrs. Kanwit's plans materialize. She would like to increase anti-trust activities of the office to a 50-50 ratio with consumer fraud cases.

"I think this region (Illinois, Indiana, Wisconsin and Minnesota) has anti-trust problems. Nearly every kind of business you could imagine has some anti-trust problems inherent in it. We have several investigations going already and we may even get some preliminary injunctions."

But then, asked what, if anything, the Commission is doing about industry X, she shakes her head in surprise as if to absorb the shock of still another new problem and sighs. "You feel you're digging out of the ocean with a cup."

MRS. KANWIT'S picture of the FTC at this time is perhaps lacking slightly in awareness of potential or actual weak spots, since she comes to the Commission without much prior knowledge of the agency.

But her approach is strictly legalistic, giving the impression that she will stand for no circumventing of the proper legal processes, whether it be consumer pressure for retribution against industry — or industry pressure for an escape hatch.

"I like to think I'm objective enough to see the interests of the public," but, she adds, as a lawyer "you have to understand both sides of any case and rise above it."

The corporation wife

She faces special hardships

The wife of the president of General Motors claims she's perfectly happy in a marriage of "man, wife and briefcase." But according to psychiatrist Robert Seidenberg, a woman who helps her husband climb the executive ladder is more often an unhappy casualty of the corporate system.

"By the time she's 40, she realizes how much she's been gypped. Through the years she's been uprooted, asked to renounce her own needs, desires and identity. And although there may be plenty of material compensation in the role, ultimately she runs out of gas — and rebels."

Even her "rebellion" follows company guidelines. "Well-trained to be docile, she'll go into sort of a passive resistance," Dr. Seidenberg discloses. "She becomes dysfunctional. She can't do the things she's always done before. Very often she'll just sit around the house. She can't find the energy to move."

TREATING SUCH women in Detroit where 100 of the nation's top 500 firms are represented led Dr. Seidenberg to describe their plight — first in a scientific paper for his colleagues — and now in a new book: "Corporate Wives — Corporate Casualties?" (Amacom, $10). While the author concedes that any woman who completely immerses herself in her husband and children is likely to feel frustrated and unworthy, particularly after the children are grown, he says the corporation wife faces special hardships.

"If she were able to stay in one community and have credentials there as a person, she'd have some identity and some clout. But when you have to move from one place to another and repeatedly start at the bottom of the local Red Cross chapter or garden club — you just don't want to take part in the community anymore. And people have a tremendous need for community involvement."

Depressed and unable to cope, the corporation wife is often quick to blame herself for what she believes are her own inadequacies.

"Who is to blame?" asks Dr. Seidenberg. A corporation that expects management wives to be "cooperative," "gracious" and "accommodating?" A husband who equates a wife's unwillingness to make yet another move with her not loving him anymore? A society that demands a wife follow her husband to the point where some state laws charge the wife with abandonment if she does not? (In those states she also loses her right to vote or hold office.)

INSTEAD OF looking for "villains," Dr. Seidenberg prefers making positive moves toward change. "The first question a wife should ask herself is not what can she do for the corporation, but what can she do for herself?" And women can help one another, suggests the doctor, who along with his lawyer wife is a member of the National Organization for Women (NOW).

"Women should form consciousness-raising groups and discuss their problems," he offers. "They may even put pressure on husbands and corporations. But even if they don't, at least the corporation wives can realize it's not their fault. And they can start thinking of themselves as people in their own right."

S&L more than a place to save, borrow money

by KAY MARSH

Are you looking for savings on a major medical insurance policy? The best possible price on a new color television set? Vitamins for less? Discounts on a rental car? Special travel packages? Savings on zoo tickets or a flight abroad?

Strange as it seems, one of the best places these days to find all these "plus" features — and many more — is at your friendly savings and loan association.

Savings and loans today offer you far more than a place to save or borrow money. They're competing harder than ever for your savings dollar, and to win it they're offering you a host of "special added attractions" that may be worth as much to you as the interest you earn on your account.

Consumer advice is one area where savings and loan associations really try to help. Maybe they figure that if we all buy wisely, we'll all have more money left to save in their institutions. At any rate, some of the best consumer advice around these days comes in the various digests, magazines, newsletters and consumer-information bulletins put out by the savings and loan associations.

Buying help is another popular service. At least one association offers membership in its Consumer Savings Foundation to every account holder with a minimum savings account balance of $1,000. And what does this purchasing service offer? The list includes vitamins and certain drugs by mail order, discounts on car rentals, insurance packages, discounts at certain motels and recreational spots, and others. However, perhaps its most popular feature is a "Quick Quote" service on nationally known brands of consumer items, many of which are available at a discount. Once you know the make and model of an item you're interested in buying, you write or call for the "low member price." To order, you send in your form and check; the association then contacts you regarding delivery (and installation if required).

"Write or call" is no mere phrase, either. There's a special toll-free phone for members. This same association, by the way, also has a new, toll-free Information Phone so savers who live out of state may call with questions about their accounts or for information and assistance.

Free financial services can boost your savings return, too. Free travelers checks and a free safe deposit box are frequently offered "extras" that help your budget. Many associations offer, too, free notary services, free copying, free trust deed and note collection, free money orders and even free checking accounts. For some of these services, it's true, you have to maintain a certain minimum balance. On the other hand, at least one California institution offering such a package invites you to transfer the benefits to a relative there if you live out-of-state and can't use the services yourself.

Retirement planning is another area of concern. Retirees, especially, usually have a special interest in the various check-a-month plans available. And those of us who aren't retired yet and who are self-employed may want to take advantage of an association's help in planning a tax-sheltered retirement fund.

Travel is a big lure for many account holders. Some associations arrange discounts on certain trips; others plan special package tours for their customers.

Other associations wrap up their travel, entertaining and consumer product savings into one club package and offer their customers club membership. A recent publication from such a group offers members just about everything from a 40 per cent discount on furs to $1.50 off hockey tickets. Trips offered range from local excursions by chartered bus to 26 days in Greece via a luxury jet, all at attractive prices.

At no price, many associations offer such free events as movies, fashion shows and lectures. Some, too, offer special lounges for club members, complete with "complimentary refreshments and worldwide periodicals." Most associations also offer rooms for community events and civic meetings, and some give their savings customers priority on reservations.

Of course, not all the extras mentioned here are available at every savings and loan association. And many of these services, or similar ones, are also offered by commercial banks, credit unions and other financial institutions.

The point is that a penny saved is more than just a penny earned. It can also be your passport to a lot of interesting (and money-saving) extras, if you shop around a little and take advantage of the various plus services often available to you as a customer.

Monarchs slept here

Royal bedrooms of famous monarchs done in miniature may be seen now through April 22 at John M. Smyth's Northpoint Store in Arlington Heights, Rand and Palatine roads.

The authentically detailed miniature rooms were created by Eugene Kupjack, known for designing part of the Thorne Collection at the Chicago Art Institute. They now are on tour sponsored by Serta, bedding manufacturers.

Included are the royal chambers of Czar Peter the Great in the Te-rem Palace in Russia's Kremlin. The Russian czar slept in a four-poster with his throne room adjoining his bedroom.

The bedroom of King Tut features a gold bed fashioned after a bull, revered animal in the 14th century B.C. The bed was found in King Tut's Tomb in 1922.

Sharply contrasting is the Mongolian "moon bed" from the bedroom of Kublai Khan. Its design was inspired by the round Temple of Heaven in Peking.

KC Royals' first lady

She mixes business and pleasure

by HELEN HENNESSY

Kansas City, Mo. — Muriel Kauffman, first lady of the 1973 Major League All-Star Game, is a woman who minds her business, big business.

She is treasurer of a multimillion dollar pharmaceutical company and a director of her husband's Kansas City Royals, the American League baseball franchise here.

"I'm at the office every day and I love it," she said. "I can't imagine being anywhere else."

She has been involved in business matters since her early '20s when she became responsible for the family business after her father, a member of the Canadian parliament, died. In addition she was in business with her brother in Toronto.

"I LEARNED WHEN I was a little girl that my father had wanted another boy," she admitted. "From that time on I set out to prove to him that girls were every bit as smart as boys," she said.

She proved it again when the annual baseball classic came to Kansas City at the Royals Stadium last July. Thanks to Mrs. Kauffman, for the first time in history, the game and its surrounding social activities ceased being a strictly "stag" affair. She mobilized the distaff side of KC and planned a whirlwind schedule of events for the wives of players, managers, sports writers and baseball executives — including a luncheon at her own home.

But doing the unusual is usual for her. She established an impressive record in school earning degrees in economics, law and political science from McMaster University in Hamilton, Ont. Twice married and widowed in the years that followed, she gained additional experience through handling the estates and businesses that became her responsibility.

SHE MET EWING Kauffman almost 12 years ago in Florida while she was recovering from an automobile accident. Kauffman, president of Marion Laboratories, recognized that she could be a valuable asset to his company, which he started 22 years ago in the basement of his suburban Kansas City home. But she declined his initial offer of a position with the company.

"To put him off," she said, "I told him

I'd rather have a more active role in the corporation. He called my bluff and made me treasurer."

The Kauffmans were married six months later. "We worked as a corporate team," she said. "It was a merger of love and purpose."

The Kauffmans take great pride in their company's organization. When Muriel joined the laboratories she and Kauffman knew every employee, his family and problems. The company has lost some of the "closeness" as it has expanded but its business philosophy has never changed. The Kauffmans believe Marion employees should share in the business success they help to create. A corporate profit sharing plan, funded by the company, provides an incentive for employees and has made wealthy people out of many of them.

MURIEL KAUFFMAN is a director of City National Bank and Trust Company, Kansas City. She is the first woman to be elected to a major bank board there and the third woman on the board of a major bank in the United States. She also works on local civic and cultural projects and feels that the goals of women's liberation are too confined.

"I don't see liberation as something for women only," she said. "I want to see everyone liberated from economic inequality, from inequality in education and social distinction. This is meaningful liberation for all."

Some people she has worked with think they are complimenting her when they tell her she thinks like a man. "I resent that," she said. "I think like a person. I feel that logic and reason have no sex."

The Kansas City Royals are Mrs. Kauffman's second great love. Four years ago when the Kansas City Athletics moved to Oakland, Mrs. Kauffman urged her husband to buy an expansion team.

AS ECONOMISTS, she and her husband viewed the investment as speculative. The initial franchise cost more than $5 million and losses have been substantial each year. But they look forward to a turnaround as the fortunes of the team improve. And the "New Blue Machine," as the team is called, has looked good this past year.

"Anyway, we've never had so much fun," she said. "It's given us an opportunity to return tangible good to the community will which all Kansas City residents can share."

Puccini mass published

by WILBORN HAMPTON

In 1890 a young music student wrote a mass as part of his final exam at the Milan Conservatory where he was studying.

Although his professor, Carlo Angeloni, who was also one of Italy's most severe critics, praised the work extravagantly, the young student was not all that proud of his mass and declined to allow it to be published.

Throughout the rest of his life Giacomo Puccini referred to his mass for four voices with orchestra as his "youthful sin" and refused to allow its publication.

Now, on the 50th anniversary of his death, the Puccini family has given in to a clamor of world music entrepreneurs and authorized its publication.

Vatican Radio has brought out the first recording with Gino Sinimberghi as tenor, John Giavola as baritone and full chorus and orchestra under the direction of Alberico Vitalini. It is a beautifully harmonic and melodious work.

PUCCINI COMPOSED the Credo of the mass in 1878 for performance in Lucca, near his hometown of Massa Marittima, on the feast day of San Paolino, Patron of Lucca. He completed the mass two years later for his final exam and its first and last complete performance was again in Lucca.

Puccini was influenced by another professor, Amilcare Ponchielli, who turned his interest toward the theater and even found a writer with a libretto for Puccini to compose his first opera, "Le Villi," which La Scala staged the following year.

With his initial success and a quick commission for a second opera, "Edgardo," Puccini never looked back. And it is these first operas which make the newly published mass so interesting.

Puccini constantly plagiarized his own early works for themes in his later operas. This might explain one reason he did not want the mass published, since several themes from the mass, developed more fully, appear in later operas.

IN "EDGARDO," for instance, the church scene in the first act is taken directly from the Kyrie of the mass. And the beautiful Agnus Dei from the mass appears later in the second act Madrigal in "Manon Lescaut."

One also finds in the mass the lyric and theatrical style which characterized a large part of sacred music in the 19th century. For example, the mass bears musical traces of what theatrical audiences would later hear as the Ted Deum in "Tosca" or scenes out of "Suor Angelica."

Even if Puccini's youthful sin was found to be "a bit theatrical" by his professors, it is now the Vatican which has given us this important work to add to the library of one of music's greatest composers.

Here's how to announce an engagement in Herald

Paddock Suburban Living department is often called by those seeking information on submitting announcements for publication. We print the following for the reader's information and help.

The announcement of an engagement is always made by the parents of the engaged girl, who may either fill out an engagement form at our office or submit their own information along with a wallet-sized picture of the bride-to-be.

If a wallet-sized photograph is not available, a larger one can be used.

Bring or mail picture and copy to the Herald office in Arlington Heights or mail to Paddock Publications, Box 290, Arlington Heights, Ill., 60006.

Parents not using one of our forms may either write or type the information. If the announcement is submitted in hand-writing we ask that all names be printed to avoid errors. We also request that a phone number accompany the signature at the bottom of the announcement.

A glossy picture is preferable although a dull finish is acceptable. Color photos are used at the discretion of the editors depending on contrast and depth of color.

There is no charge for engagement pictures and announcements. Usually they will be printed within a week after reaching our office.

All announcements must be in our office at least a month before the wedding date.

Book tells role of a new father

So you're going to be a new father.

Traditionally, the main function of the father of a new baby was handing out cigars. But times are changing. Now, many husbands stay with their wives throughout labor and are present during the delivery of the child.

The literature on pregnancy and babies is also changing. For example, the Department of Health, Education and Welfare's Office of Child Development has just published a booklet on the subject specifically for men.

"So You're Going to Be a New Father" discusses the man's role during pregnancy and after the baby is born. Copies may be ordered for 40 cents each from Consumer Information, Pueblo, Colo. 81009.

She throws out the soup vegetables

Dear Dorothy We were kaffeeklatch-ing about recipes and a friend said you made great vegetable soup but that you threw away all the vegetables at one point in the cooking It sounded knooky to me and she said I should write you So I am What is it you do? Elaine Clendinen.

This takes space so this is a one-item column Hope you consider the end result worth it First day I put on soup meat, marrow bone bones left over from a roast along with the basic vegetables — carrots celery and onions The soup meat becomes a dinner dish that night, served with horseradish sauce The soup is strained and, yes, the cooked-out vegetables thrown away What is left are two to three quarts of rich soup stock, which goes into the refrigerator

Next day the fat congealed at the top is easily lifted off Now I start with vegetables I like working with two pots Into the big soup pot goes a large handful of split peas and water to cover When it's almost soft a tablespoon of pearl barley goes in frozen chopped spinach and two cans of cut-up tomatoes While this cooks gently, the other pot gets a little water and about half the soup stock Only frozen vegetables go into this pot The timer goes on for 12 minutes and baby limas go in first (The times are all on the packages so you don't have to guess)

When four minutes of the 12 have ticked off, a package of cut green beans is added Then comes a package of sliced baby okra followed in four minutes by a package of cut corn and a package of sweet peas When the bell rings, that pot is ready and the contents are poured into the big pot Partial to crisp celery, several ribs are cleaned and sliced and cooked for about two minutes in a little water This goes into the big pot along with the rest of the stock

This makes from eight to ten quarts, depending on how much stock you start with Frozen in plastic ice-cream cartons the soup goes to friends — and the children, of course Hope you and many others try it and sound off on what you think.

What's right size air conditioner

Room size alone will not determine the efficiency of an air conditioning unit

A room's dimensions reveal only the amount of air that must be conditioned in an ideal situation What also must be considered, according to Don Harlacker, manager of room air conditioners at the York division of Borg-Warner Corp is the "heat-gain source"

For example if there is nothing in a room 15 by 17 feet that increases normal heat and humidity that space may be comfortably cooled and dehumidified by a 5,000 BTU unit a little less than one-half ton Harlacker claims

What is important in determining the correct unit for a room is consideration of the following heat-gain sources if they exist in a room

- Sliding glass doors that let in the sun's radiant heat
- Windows with southern exposure
- Heavy draperies that absorb and capillate heat in a room.
- Heat and humidity in a bedroom with adjoining bath
- Cooking heat from a nearby kitchen

With air conditioners that contain thermostats it is better to install a slightly undersized unit than one too large for an area Harlacker advises A too-large unit will cool the room too quickly, causing the compressor to turn on and off repeatedly, thus using more power without filtering or dehumidifying the air adequately

"A continuously run smaller unit also can be less expensive than one too large Harlacker says "Once a room is cooled, a minimum amount of power is required by the air conditioner to keep it cool If heat is allowed to build up, however, the unit will have to work at full capacity over a longer period of time to remove the humidity and lower the temperature to the degree desired"

THINGS YOU MAY NOT KNOW ABOUT CONSERVING ELECTRICITY

Set your clothes washer and dryer for savings.

Using the correct settings on your automatic washer and dryer can cut your laundering costs On both your washer and dryer, adjust the setting for each type of item Less hot water in your washer and a lower temperature in your dryer means less energy is consumed. For example, a permanent press item can be washed in warm water and dried on a warm setting Higher settings waste energy and often do an inferior job

Also, you may be able to regulate the operating time on your washer or dryer to save energy. On your washer, partial-load settings use a shorter cycle to clean smaller loads A "damp dry" setting on your dryer not only reduces the energy used but also prepares the clothes for immediate ironing without sprinkling—cutting down on your laundry time, too These hints are included in our free booklet "101 Ways to Conserve Electricity at Home" For your free copy write Commonwealth Edison Department AV, P O Box 767, Chicago Illinois 60690

Goodwill Industries

Worker program good business

by HELEN HENNESSY

Many people who thought they would never be able to work are now gainfully employed because of programs offered by Goodwill Industries of America.

Last year, training and employment offered in some 152 locations in this country enabled handicapped individuals to earn $49 million in wages and pay over $21 million in federal and local taxes. In order to provide these opportunities for the handicapped, Goodwill centers need the cooperation of business and industry.

"But convincing representatives of these groups that handicapped people can work effectively and efficiently isn't always easy," said Dean Phillips, executive director of the organization. "We are anxious for more people to see the types of work produced by the handicapped in our Industrial Services Department."

"IN GENERAL we try to procure work that helps rehabilitate our 'clients' (as opposed to staff workers) and enable them to enter or return to private industry. In the case of the severely handicapped, sheltered employment in a rehabilitation facility is the best choice."

Contract work is an area that many people do not know about. Most people assume that Goodwill collects and repairs clothing and furnishes for resale — and that's all. But the handicapped are talented in putting new merchandise together and the cost of reconditioning these services at a Goodwill is competitive.

"Because work contracts assigned by companies are a major source of revenue and employment," Phillips said, "we are delighted with the number of companies that assign work to our centers again and again. Western Electric is one of a growing number of companies that is assigning contracts to us. In 1972 that company awarded contracts worth more than $300,000 to 11 different Goodwill agencies."

IN COMMENTING on the long relationship with Goodwill workshops Arthur G. Foster, vice president of purchasing and transportation of Western Electric said, "They do the jobs placed with them as well as we could do them ourselves."

Foster is chairman of Goodwill's advisory council created to involve top members of business and industry in the continued professional development of policies and services of Goodwill worldwide. tract industrial leaders interested in broadening their scope of involvement with the handicapped.

For example, at the Indianapolis Works of Western Electric a number of repetitive jobs that involve a steady volume are contracted out to Goodwill workers who are suited for assembly and packaging work.

"Goodwill is treated in exactly the same way as any other outside supplier who does work for us," Foster explained. "The Works' inspection organization checks the quality of Goodwill's jobs. If they don't measure up they go back — just as they would to any supplier. However, the quality is exceptionally high."

BEFORE A CONTRACT is assigned to Goodwill, Foster explained, one of their representatives looks at a job as it is done by Western Electric to determine whether it could be handled by handicapped workers. When a contract is awarded, either a representative of Goodwill or of the company explains how the job is done.

"Individual contract work is essential to the success of Goodwill's program of rehabilitation training and job placement. It provides an opportunity for handicapped workers to learn practical skills for jobs in competitive industry, it provides them needed income from wages and it provides industry with a source of reliable contract labor," Dean Phillips said.

Phillips said.

"We have yet to realize the full benefit of such Goodwill/private industry contract programs, but good progress is being made."

Extension cord burns can scar a lifetime

Some of the most tragic of all accident victims are young children who have suffered electrical burns in their mouths from extension cords.

"The triple outlet extension cord is the chief offender," says Ordie Hogsett, University of Illinois safety specialist. "Usually only one or two of the three outlets are used at one time. A one or two-year-old child is attracted to the outlet on the floor; he places the outlet in his mouth; if the cord is plugged in, his saliva will conduct the current through his mouth."

Apart from the initial pain, the wound heals slowly and the scarring is great, Hogsett adds. Severe cases defy all efforts by skilled surgeons to reconstruct the area, and some disfigurement usually remains.

"THE INJURY is apparent to all, but especially to parents who are greatly upset by feelings of guilt in allowing this 'unnecessary' accident to happen," says the safety specialist.

It's best not to use extension cords, but when you do, follow these precautions, Hogsett urges. Buy a good extension cord, not one that is poorly constructed. If there are small children in the house or if you have children visit you often, it's probably best to choose cords with self-closing outlets. Or buy plastic safety caps and use them.

Make sure that the connection between the service cord and the extension cord fits snugly. In some cases, it is impossible to close the gap and part of the prongs are exposed. If you can't close the gap, try different extension cords until you can.

GET INTO THE habit of unplugging the extension cord at the wall outlet, then remove the service cord, if necessary. Never leave an extension cord plugged into the wall outlet after you are through using it.

Despite all precautions, there still may be accidents, says Hogsett. Until a child is old enough to understand, the only solution is to watch him carefully. But by the time a child is four years old, he should be taught the basic rules of safety with electricity, including extension cords.

A high-spirited book about freedom for kids

by PATRICIA McCORMACK

"Free to be You and Me" sounds like the title for a sequel to "Jonathan Livingston Seagull."

The Seagull tale told of freedom, but the book "Free to Be . . . You and Me" is not related to Jonathan's flight.

Rather, it is about freedom for boys and girls to grow up. This book for children is based on the record by the same title and developed as a project of the Ms. Foundation Inc., belonging to Ms. Magazine.

The book, according to the publisher, McGraw-Hill, is one of "honest exuberance and open options."

It is a high-spirited combination of stories, songs and poems that capture unconscious emotions free of sexual or racial bias.

It contains a child-pleasing mix of color and black and white drawings, cartoons, and pictures.

It was Marlo Thomas who had the idea for the book based on the record. She was saddened when she asked to read a bedtime story to a niece.

"I WAS SADDENED to find that all of her books were just that, books that put her and her mind to sleep," she said.

"I started to look through stores and found a shelf of books that told boys and girls who they should be, who they ought to be, but seldom who they could be.

"I wanted a book for Dionne, a special book . . . to celebrate who she was and who she could be, all the possibilities and all the possible Dionnes.

"I've always believed that anybody could do anything, especially me. I wanted Dionne to feel that way."

The new book is such a book. It is meant that each child get out and sing in person the stories and songs in the book.

Miss Thomas cautions that there is no Wonderland or Prince Charming or Sleepy Princess in the book. The world depicted in the book is "more adventurous, the largest, the most wondrous of all the world of feeling and the land of ourselves," she says.

From the book is the new version of What are Little Boys Made of — and What are Little Girls made of. By Elaine Laron, the new versions go like this:

"What are Little Boys made of, made of? What are Little Boys made of? Love and care and skin and hair, that's what Little Boys are made of."

LITTLE GIRLS, meanwhile, are made of care and love and (see above).

Little Boys and Girls are made of the same things.

Several pieces in the book challenge stereotypes that have been imprinted on children's imaginations and, according to the authors, "stunted their emotional development and restricted the games, toys and people they play with."

Two or three selections redefine fairytales. Sleeping Beauty can stay awake and look at her life with eyes wide open. The brave prince is given a chance to relax and enjoy his life without continually having to prove his manhood.

Lettin Cottin Pogrebin, an editor of Ms. Magazine and also an editor of the new book, adds this note to parents and other grown-up friends of children:

"If you stop and think about it you'll find something here about brotherhood that includes sisterhood, and about cooperation and friendship and about mutual respect and personal dignity.

"BUT IF YOU don't stop to think about it, you'll find pure entertainment that will bring exuberant joy into your classroom or living room.

"So grab a guitar, sit down at the piano or snuggle with someone at bedtime and start enjoying this book.

"There's something in it for the free spirit in every adult and the wise soul in every child."

They met, married in same church

Two families who are longtime members of the First United Methodist Church of Arlington Heights were united in more than their church affiliation on March 9.

It occurred through the marriage of Linda Jean Brown, daughter of the Richard T. Browns, 1516 E. Wing St., and Mark B. Shields, son of Mr. and Mrs. John J. Shields, 308 N. Drury Lane.

Linda and Mark first became acquainted while in high school, then did not see each other for four years. After graduation from Prospect High in 1968, Mark went to the University of Wisconsin, LaCrosse, and Linda, a '71 graduate of Prospect, went to the University of Illinois.

THEY WERE married in their home church in an 11:30 a.m. ceremony. Afterward they greeted guests at a luncheon and dancing reception at Old Orchard Country Club.

For her wedding day Linda wore her mother's bridal gown of ivory satin with sweetheart neck, long sleeves and a lacy train. Over it she wore a full-length mantilla veil that was covered with a lace motif. Her bouquet was of ivory roses with greens.

Linda's sister, Susie Brown, was her maid of honor and Patti Krampert, Mount Prospect, and Beth Martin, Winnetka, were bridesmaids. They wore old-fashioned gowns in ivory overlaid with a peach and green floral print. Their flowers were cluster arrangements of peach carnations and baby's breath.

Mark chose Clint Bown, Buffalo Grove, as his best man while John Brown, also Buffalo Grove, and Jim Farrell, Des Plaines, ushered.

The bridal pair had a short honeymoon at Nordic Hills Country Club and will soon leave for Monterey, Calif., where Mark will enter Ed Browley's Professional Diving Instructors College.

Keep house clean to relieve allergies

Removing a buildup of household dust with thorough spring cleaning and other control measure can be a big help in relieving the breathing problems of persons sensitive to dust and other airborne irritants.

"Since the majority of allergic people suffer from allergens they inhale such as house dust, pollen, spores of mold and some chemicals," says Dr. Bertram W. Carnow, medical director of Chicago Lung Association, "control of the indoor environment is one of the best methods of providing them some relief."

Approximately one in five people develop a sensitivity to certain substances which do not affect the rest of the population. Dr. Carnow explains. After prolonged exposure to these substances, people who are sensitive to them develop symptoms similar to that of a common cold. These may include a runny nose, itchy eyes, sneezing, wheezing, cough, tightness in the chest and difficulty in breathing.

IN A THOROUGH house cleaning, walls and furniture should be dusted and floors should be damp mopped regularly, Dr. Carnow advises. Drapes and carpeting should be vacuumed thoroughly. Use of aerosol cleaning agents, polishes and waxes should be avoided and care should be taken in working with other forms of cleaning agents to minimize respiratory irritation.

Bedrooms occupied by persons sensitive to household dust and other allergens specially furnished to reduce dust. These measures include keeping only essential items in the room, using a mattress pillow and blankets of allergen free material or keeping them enclosed. Curtains of washable cotton should be used instead of heavy drapes and washable throw rugs should be substituted for carpeting.

Closets should be used only for storing clothing and they should be kept in clothing bags. These measures, coupled with careful housekeeping should achieve very effective control of dust and other irritants to the lungs.

FURTHER CONTROL of dust and other airborne irritants can be achieved by using electrostatic air filters in the central heating system or in individual rooms. Dr. Carnow suggests, however, these devices must be carefully maintained to prevent sparking which can cause irritating ozone.

More free information on how to control the home environment may be obtained by writing to Chicago Lung Association, 1140 W. Washington, Chicago, Ill. 60607, or by calling 243-2000 and asking for a leaflet on that subject.

A Paddock review

Powerful drama at the Ivanhoe

by GENIE CAMPBELL

Life can be tough. And in each succeeding generation, some of the same problems occur.

William Inge's "The Dark at the Top of the Stairs" focuses on the strife and discord within one four-member family. It's a strong, identifiable concept still relevant today, even though the play's setting is the early 1920s.

The Ivanhoe production with Betsy Palmer in the starring role is a dramatic masterpiece that explodes from the beginning and maintains a sensitive high from start to finish.

There is no lesson to be learned and the plot is easily deciphered. "The Dark at the Top of the Stairs" promises "a happy ever after" ending following a trying period of discontent, quarrelling and remorse.

THERE WILL always be the shortcomings of life... wanting more than one can afford and attempting to rise above personal faults and inadequacies.

George Keathley has deftly directed a hand-picked cast through separate trials and disappointments. The acting, by far, is the play's greatest credit. It demands audience involvement.

When Inge pulls all his dramatic interludes and personal confrontations together in the third act, the overall impact becomes exceedingly melodramatic though the overall appeal of the show is not disturbed. It is also a bit difficult today to imagine a Jewish boy committing suicide over a few ethnic barbs by one well-to-do member of the country club. Life has changed for the better in some respects.

MARKING HER Chicago stage debut, Betsy Palmer eases gently and naturally into the role of Cora, a dominant wife and mother whose own selfish desires for her children blind her to the harsh realities of life.

If she were hard and calculating, we'd simply dismiss her. But Betsy is femininely demure all the while she remains doggedly determined to shelter her children.

dren. Her daughter becomes a shy introvert and her son a spoiled brat.

Playing the children are Stephanie Farcy, who makes a most commendable professional debut as 16-year-old Rennie, and Clay Taylor as 10-year-old Sonny.

Also featured is Wayne Tippit in the role of Rubin Flood, a handsome once-daring young man who angrily rebels at his wife's attempts to harness and tame his life.

Cora thinks she yearns for luxuries and security until she learns the fate of her older sister who has everything but peace of mind and happiness.

THE SECOND ACT buffers between a tragedy and riotous comedy with Marian Walters on stage as sister Lottie.

Those who saw "Hotel Baltimore" at the Ivanhoe delighted in Miss Walters' performance as the aging comical prostitute. For that portrayal she received the Joseph Jefferson Award as "Best Actress of 1973." Her performance in "The Dark at the Top of the Stairs" is every bit as good.

Also appearing in the three-act drama are Edgar Meyer as Morris Lacey, a beaten husband who no longer even tries to fight back; Michael Lloyd as Sammy Godenbaum, a Jewish boy who can't cope with his heritage; David Beird as Punky Givens, a silly young cadet; and Maria Friedman as Flirt Conroy, the flamboyant friend of Rennie.

Setting and costumes for "The Dark at the Top of the Stairs" are outstanding in their depiction of the '20s.

True or false?

In the spring many a fancy turns toward the circus — and maybe to its elephants.

So Axel Gautier, trainer of elephants for Ringling Bros. and Barnum & Bailey Circus, thought it might be a good time to make up a list of "some of the things you always thought about elephants which aren't true."

- Elephants do forget. "They can remember anything they've ever heard, but their visual retention is no better than anyone else's."
- Elephants never get sick. They do.
- Elephants live hundreds of years. "They don't live any longer than humans."
- Elephants love peanuts. "They will accept them, but they much prefer cigar butts, a loaf of bread, doughnuts, coffee and watermelon rind."
- Elephants are terrified of mice. Nonsense.
- In the jungle elephants are no match for lions and tigers. Not so. "Elephants are well aware of their own strength and reluctant to use it. However, once threatened, they attack with full force and no animal can stand up to the devastating power of an angry elephant's trunk." (UPI)

Building permit slowdown promised if developer fails

Aspen Creek restoration to be completed by spring?

Restoration of the controversial Aspen Ditch in Lake County Buffalo Grove is scheduled to be completed by this spring, village officials said Tuesday.

Work on the ditch was supposed to be completed last fall, but officials blamed the delay on "procrastination" by Levitt and Sons Inc., the developer of the Aspen area. As part of an agreement with the village Levitt is supposed to restore the portion of the ditch north of Twisted Oak Lane.

Work on the ditch was started last October, but was halted after residents complained it was not being done properly. Since that time village and Levitt officials have met and agreed on a plan for restoring the ditch.

Levitt has accepted bids and is expected to award contracts for the work very soon. Village Engineer Arnold Seaberg said he expects work to begin within a few weeks. Once work is started, he said it should only take about two weeks to finish the project.

VILLAGE MGR. Daniel Larson has said if Levitt does not do the work this spring, the village will slow down the issuance of building permits for one of Levitt's new developments. There was a building permit slow down last fall, but the village lifted it with the understanding that work would be done this spring.

Officials said it would have been unfair to slow down the building permits when weather would not permit Levitt to do the work.

According to Larson, the village can process the permits slower, but cannot refuse to issue them unless the builder is in violation of ordinances on the specific project for which they have been requested. Permits cannot be refused for some extraneous reason, he said.

WORK WILL consist of resloping, cleaning and planting grass along the ditch. A number of small plateaus will be constructed so the banks of the ditch will not be too steep. A small retaining wall also will be constructed along the west bank and several measures will be taken to prevent further erosion of the ditch.

Upon completion, the ditch is supposed to resemble the area near Old Checker Road. At that point, the ditch is about four feet wide and is not a safety hazard. Residents have complained that the portion north of Twisted Oak Lane is both an eyesore and a danger to children playing in the area.

About 400 feet of the ditch was filled in last summer after a group of residents complained. An underground pipe was installed in its place.

Village officials said they would prefer to cover the entire ditch, but the cost would be too expensive. They said the open part of the ditch is not as hazardous and does not have the erosion problems that were evident in the portion of the ditch that is now closed.

Residents near the open portion have asked the village to make filling in the ditch a "high priority."

One kidnaping suspect declared illegal immigrant

One of two men charged with Sunday's alleged kidnaping near Wheeling has been declared an illegal immigrant to the United States, Illinois State Police said Tuesday. The accused pair allegedly abducted two North Shore teen-agers at knifepoint from the Twin Drive-In, 1010 S. Milwaukee Ave.

Jose Luis Freyre Ruiz, 21, is illegally in this country, police said. The determination was made by U. S. Immigration authorities who have been called in on the case. The other man arrested was Fernando Del Vega Ibarra, 18. Both men are reportedly from the Wheeling area.

ONE OF THE two victims of the alleged kidnaping, Kathleen Manella, 18, remained in good condition yesterday at a local hospital. A spokeswoman for the hospital said Miss Manella had facial lacerations.

Miss Manella was injured in an automobile accident which occurred after Ruiz and Ibarra allegedly commandeered the auto Miss Manella and a companion, David McEachron, were in.

It was the accident, on River Road just south of Hintz Road, which led to the immediate arrest of one of the two suspects and the arrest of the other several hours later.

The incident began about 1 a.m. Sunday. Ruiz and Ibarra are both being held in Cook County Jail with bond set at $50,000 for each man. They are to appear April 15 in the Mount Prospect branch of Cook County Circuit Court on charges of kidnaping, aggravated assault, unlawful use of a weapon and auto theft.

Police still are withholding addresses, the hospital location of the injured girl and exactly how many people were involved in the case because they "are continuing the investigation."

The purpose of the exchange is to make available to children used books in good condition for the price of a used book which they have read.

The exchange is sponsored by the Buffalo Grove Junior Woman's Club committee of education and youth.

"THE HARE WHO lost his spectacles" with, from front, Pam Kapickak, Liz Walters, Kim Stickrod, Patty Cinudde, and Nancy True, will be one of the numbers in the Wheeling High School orchesis show. The show will be at 8 p.m. Friday and Saturday at the school. Tickets are $1.

Bicycle licensing to be required

Buffalo Grove has revised its bicycle ordinance and starting June 1 all residents will be required to license their bikes with the village.

In addition, the new ordinance has provisions for ticketing riders who are found in violation of traffic laws. The revision was approved Monday night by the village board following a recommendation from Police Chief Harry Walsh.

The new ordinance is part of an overall bicycle safety program being organized by the village and several local organizations. The Buffalo Grove Junior Woman's Club suggested the program.

UNDER THE REVISED ordinance, residents will be required to obtain a license decal and attach it to their bikes. The licenses will be free and will be available at the police station, 50 Raupp Blvd. Parents will be responsible for obtaining and displaying the decals on the bikes of children under 14 years old.

Licenses will be issued only after the bikes are checked to make sure they meet certain safety standards. Among the equipment checked will be lights, brakes and reflectors. The safety checks will be conducted prior to the license deadline.

The new bicycle ordinance will give police the right to issue tickets that carry fines to adult bike riders (17 and older) who are found guilty of violating state or local traffic laws. The fines would be not less than $5 or more than $50. Walsh has suggested the fines be set at $5.

IN THE CASE of tickets which carry fines, residents will be given a court date, at which time they would be able to plead innocent to the violation. The cases would be held in Cook County Circuit Court, the same as motor vehicle violations.

Walsh also has suggested the village consider establishing an informal bike safety court to review cases involving children with flagrant or repeated violations. The committee, he said, should be oriented toward educating the violators rather than punishing them.

The new ordinance was passed subject to review by the village attorney to make sure it is not in violation of any state statutes. It also will be periodically updated so that it conforms to state regulations.

Just ask the 'Superchicks'

Omni-House is not just for 'bad' youths

by JILL BETTNER

"The Superchicks" are a group of 12 eighth-grade girls at London Junior High School in Wheeling who are trying to spread the word that Omni-House: Youth Services Bureau is not just for "bad kids."

No drug addicts, runaways or juvenile delinquents, the girls are a bunch of average teen-agers interested in having fun with a little help from the Wheeling counseling agency.

"The Superchicks" is one of 22 outreach groups organized by Omni-House at London, Cooper and Holmes junior high schools in Dist. 21, MacArthur Junior High School, Prospect Heights Dist. 23, Wheeling and Hersey high schools.

THE GIRLS are concerned that Omni-House has the mistaken reputation as being nothing more than a sort of halfway house for kids in trouble.

"Parents think it's only for drug addicts and kids with problems and stuff and that all they do over there is sit around and smoke dope, but that's not true," said Pam Keating. "This group gives us something to do and we go places and meet different people."

"The Superchicks" meet at lunch each Monday to plan activities for weekends. They have had several parties, gone on shopping trips, bowling and ice skating. One member of the group, Sherry Thornton, has written a play comparing school life in the '50s to the 1970s entitled "Now and Then," to be produced next month.

Other activities in the works include a spaghetti dinner for a group of favorite teachers, a camping trip to Wisconsin and fund-raising projects for Omni-House.

A staff member from Omni-House supervises the activities of the outreach groups, but the rules of the organization are established by the members themselves.

LOIS BROLL, Omni-House counselor, who works with The Superchicks, described the groups as "self-determining." Instead of having adults impose limits on the group, the girls decide themselves what they want to do and how to do it. Part of the goal of Omni-House in setting up the groups is to give the students a chance to learn responsibility, she said.

Several members of the group agree that they get to do a lot of things they wouldn't otherwise have the opportunity to do without Omni-House. "It's sort of like a 'Y' group of something. There isn't anything else like it here," one Superchick said.

Besides enjoying the group as a sort of social club, the girls say getting together gives them a chance to share ideas and discuss common problems.

"We've gotten really close," one girl said. "Sometimes I think parents think all we're interested in is smoking grass and there's all kind of lovemaking going on in the corners, but that's crazy, man! We just like to do things and get out of the house and that's all it is."

STEPPING OUT with batons held high are Susan Missing, 9, and instructor Donna Hieber at the Wheeling Park District's baton classes.

Story hour offered again

The Buffalo Grove Junior Woman's Club and the Wheeling Public Library will cooperate to again provide a children's story hour for local youngsters.

The story hour will be at Longfellow School, 501 Arlington Heights Rd., with sessions scheduled for 9:45, 10:30, and 11:15 a.m. and 1:15, and 2 p.m. each Thursday in May.

Registration for 3 and 4-year-olds will begin April 15 at the Wheeling Public Library, 850 Jenkins Ct., Wheeling.

The children's story hour will include not only stories, but movies, songs and action-oriented activities. Children may borrow books provided by the Wheeling Library at the story hour and coffee will be supplied to mothers waiting for their youngsters.

The curriculum for the story hour has been designed by the Buffalo Grove Junior Woman's Club committee on education and youth and the staff of the children's department at the Wheeling Public Library.

Members of the Junior Woman's Club will provide supervision at the story hours.

Auto sticker notices sent by village

Some 700 "deadbeat letters" have gone out to Buffalo Grove residents who have not purchased village vehicle stickers.

The letters, referred to as "deadbeat letters" in the police department, were sent out last week. Police Sgt. Arthur Voigt said Tuesday. They are sent to all village addresses for which the police records show no village stickers have been purchased.

Voigt said many times the letters are sent to residents who do not own cars and therefore do not have to buy the stickers. The stickers for automobiles cost $10 each and must be purchased by Feb. 15 each year.

The penalty is $15 if a police ticket is issued. The police, Voigt said, already have gone through the apartment complexes parking lots writing "several hundred" tickets.

So far this year, a total of 8,500 stickers have been sold to village residents. Last year's total was 9,167. The tickets may be purchased at the village hall, 50 Raupp Blvd., Buffalo Grove.

Some mortgages here will require flood insurance

The purchase of federally subsidized flood insurance has become a requirement for mortgage loans in some areas of the Northwest suburbs under a federal regulation that went into effect on March 2.

The insurance, available from most local insurance agents, must now be bought by owners of homes that lie in "special flood hazard areas" before those homes can be mortgaged by federally regulated banks and savings and loan associations.

Maps outlining special flood hazard areas, as defined by the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development, have been prepared for Arlington Heights, Des Plaines, Elk Grove Village, Mount Prospect, Palatine, Rolling Meadows and Wheeling.

Maps for Buffalo Grove, Hoffman Estates and Schaumburg are being prepared and should be available by July.

In addition, more detailed hydrological studies of the 10 communities are planned to upgrade the current maps.

Hydrological study maps are already completed for Des Plaines and for Palatine.

THE NEW requirement necessitates purchase of the insurance for any new loan or modification of an existing loan on property designated as part of the special flood hazard area on the maps.

The requirement for purchase of the insurance applies not only to federally-insured loans, but also to conventional financing according to Paul Downing, a senior vice president and secretary of Uptown Federal Savings and Loan Assn. of Chicago.

Downing explained the new requirement means a financial institution cannot grant a loan unless the insurance is purchased by the homeowner.

Copies of the maps delineating areas of local communities where the mortgage flood insurance requirement is in effect may be seen at local lending institutions or copies can be obtained by contacting State Farm Insurance Co. of Bloomington, Ill.

IN ADDITION to the residents buying the flood insurance, because of the new mortgage requirement, an increasing number of Northwest suburbanites are also buying the insurance just for their own protection.

As of December, 1973 a total of 3,500 policies had been sold throughout Illinois, according to Ann Duker of the Illinois Department of Local Governmental Affairs.

Totals as of that date for local communities included 238 policies sold in Arlington Heights, 13 in Buffalo Grove, 58 in Des Plaines, 17 in Elk Grove Village, 14 in Hoffman Estates, 92 in Mount Prospect, 99 in Palatine, 14 in Schaumburg, 13 in Rolling Meadows and 26 in Wheeling.

HOWEVER, THE state total for policies sold had risen to 6,800 at the end of March, Mrs. Duker said, indicating that local totals may be higher now.

Mrs. Duker explained that discrepancies in current maps which exclude many flood prone areas from the mortgage requirement will be corrected as more detailed maps are made for each community. The current maps are based on information from the U.S. Soil Conservation Service and on U.S. Geological Survey flood plain maps, she said.

Cost for the flood insurance under the federally subsidized program is a flat annual rate of 25 cents for each $100 of coverage on property damage and 35 cents for each $100 coverage on home contents.

Total cost at maximum coverage would be $122.50.

IN SOME communities, including only the Village of Palatine locally, additional insurance on both the structure of the home and the contents can be purchased. Rates for additional insurance in Palatine are 35 cents per $100 coverage on the structure and 45 cents per $100 coverage on the contents.

Each policy has a $200 deductible clause (or 2 per cent of the amount of loss, whichever is greater) that applies to both building and contents coverage.

Federal flood insurance is also available for multiple-family residential developments, businesses, municipal buildings, churches, hotels and motels.

Retention basin OK'd by trustees

The Buffalo Grove Village Board has approved an agreement for a five-acre retention basin on the Arlington Country Club golf course.

The four-party agreement was approved unanimously by the board Monday night. The basin is expected to relieve flooding along the White Pine Ditch, Buffalo Creek and the Wheeling Drainage Ditch.

Under the agreement, the country club will supply the needed land, the state of Illinois and the Metropolitan Sanitary District (MSD) will pay for construction and the village will maintain the basin after it is completed.

The $240,000 project was supposed to be started last fall but was delayed because the village and MSD could not reach agreement over financing. By the time the problems were solved it was too late to start the project and still finish it before the start of the golf season.

Under the agreement, construction must be done between October 15 and April 15 so golfers will not be inconvenienced. Now that everything has been agreed on, the MSD will advertise for bids on the project. Construction is scheduled to begin in October.

The lake, which will have a capacity for 16 million gallons of water, will hold runoff during severe storms and prevent overloading of nearby streams and sewers. Stormwater will be held in the basin until the danger of flooding has passed and will then be released into Buffalo Creek, east of the golf course.

VW dealership OK'd

The village board Monday night gave formal approval of annexation and zoning for a Volkswagen dealership in Buffalo Grove.

In January trustees approved the concept of the dealership, which will be on a 3.94-acre tract on the east side of Buffalo Grove Road, 300 feet north of Dundee Road.

The owner of the property, the C. W. Marquardt Co., plans to begin construction of the dealership in April, 1975, with completion set for mid-1975. The agency will consist of two buildings: a showroom and a service department and parts shop.

The dealer has predicted the agency will generate about $50,000 a year in tax revenue for the village. The estimate is based on sales tax, property tax and miscellaneous taxes the village will receive as a result of the dealership.

Weber grills have become a hot item

by BETTY LEE

Years ago backyard chefs battled with billowing smoke and temperamental flames just to cook a couple of hamburgers on the charcoal grill.

While they struggled with the barbecue, a Chicago sheet metal worker stumbled into a discovery. He made a kettle out of the steel, took it home and began grilling his meals on it. He made several for his neighbors soon after.

More than 25 years later, the Weber-Stephen Product Co. in Arlington Heights is now producing the most popular and most expensive barbecue grills in the country. It has gained so much success that employees there have forgotten the name of the kettle grill inventor, aside from the fact that his last name obviously was Weber. "His first name? I don't know his first name," was it Joe?"

"This is a closely knit family operation," said Fred Hohenhurst as he sat in a wood-paneled office. Hohenhurst is the editor of the company newsletter which publishes letters from Weber grill owners and personality sketches of employees.

NOT FAR FROM the office building at 100 N. Hickory, Arlington Heights is a manufacturing plant where the kettles travel across assembly lines in black, yellow, red and copper colors. "It originally came in black," said Hohenhurst, "but people wanted it in colors."

Be it black or any other color, the Weber grill has become a status symbol among backyard chefs. It is expensive—the "Imperial Sequoia" model with a redwood wagon is list priced at $199.95. The least expensive is a small "Smokey Joe" for $19.95. Thus model, they say, is ideal for picnics, camping or as a second unit to a larger kettle.

Even with less expensive model, the spending can go high by buying accessories for the kettle grill. There are $25 wok pans for oriental cooking, assorted grills and racks, special barbecue tools, shish kabob spears, special sponges, pans and other accessories.

"It is a high priced prestige item," said Ed Schaper, vice president of sales. He added that people are buying them despite their expense because the company is experiencing its most productive year in sales.

THE MANUFACTURERS admit they don't know what goes on inside a Weber grill when something is cooking, but the kettle is used with a cover, thus working more like an oven than a regular flat grill, but retaining a barbecue flavor.

The black 22 1/2-inch charcoal model is the most popular, said Hohenhurst. "It is porcelainized steel. You can't wear out the grill and it can't rust," he said as if he was reading from one of the company catalogs.

Bread, pizza, brownies as well as a good size turkey can be cooked on the Weber kettle. "Anything you can cook in the oven you can cook on this grill," Hohenhurst said.

A special hardcover recipe book which comes with each kettle even gives a recipe for a whole roast pig for those who want an authentic luau.

THE KETTLES COME in electric and gas models for those who don't want to bother with a lot of matches and charcoal. "We were forced into making an electric one because of competition," said Hohenhurst.

Although there are sales representatives throughout the country and in Europe, the majority of the sales are in the Midwest, said Schaper.

"Here is where all the effort is," Schaper said. The grills can be bought at any big department or hardware stores in the area, he said. Company personnel go to the shopping centers and demonstrate the Weber line of products.

When the company wants to push their product, its resident cook, Betty Hughes, cooks up a storm for clients. She tests and invents recipes for the Weber cookbook.

Officials there are keeping a tight lip on how many grills they produce and what their sales are. Only a few know in order to protect the company from imitators.

"There have been imitators, but we have found we outlast them," said Schaper. "It's hard to keep a patent. Someone can change a thing here and there and the product becomes something different. But we're ahead of them."

Stormy school board session

Erviti gets a 'compromise' 5% pay raise

by BOB GALLAS
The Dist. 59 Board of Education, in what is believed to be a compromise gesture, has given all administrators a 5 per cent raise effective July 1. The raise was approved despite a call from parents and present and future board members to table any action on Supt. James Erviti's contract until a controversy between Erviti and district principals is worked out.

The announcement of the pay hike followed a three-hour executive session of the board during which Erviti's contract was apparently discussed.

The superintendent receives a yearly contract review by the board. According to sources some board members were pushing this year to extend Erviti's contract one year and give him an 8 per cent pay raise. Apparently pressure from other board members, who wanted to freeze all administrative salaries until the principals-Erviti conflict is worked out, made the compromise necessary.

Prior to their lengthy closed-door session, which went past 3 a.m. yesterday, board members heard sharp criticism of Erviti from some of the 150 parents, teachers and principals who attended the session. Criticism was also leveled at the board, which many felt should get involved in settling the dispute immediately.

THE BOARD has officially maintained its policy is to stay informed, but not involved, until members are sure the problem cannot be worked out by Erviti and his principals.

In a letter to Erviti more than a month ago, the principals listed the concerns which included the superintendent's "demeaning" treatment of principals, the district's budget development practice and the "single-text approach" principals said seems to be the direction of the district.

The principals asked that a series of meetings be held to work out the differences.

The principals, many of whom indicated that the meetings were producing "little success," called for a renewed effort in working out the problems in a statement issued at Monday night's board meeting.

Since the principals' conflict with the administration was revealed by The Herald last week, support for them has come in from all directions including the Dist. 59 Teachers' Council, numerous parent groups and individuals.

Board members Judy Zanca and outgoing member Irwin Poklacki, called for the raises to be tabled but they were voted down, 5 to 2.

THE 5 PER CENT raise applies to principals, assistant principals, the director of pupil personnel, assistant superintendents, and Erviti. The motion for the raises also included a provision which called for all salaries to be reviewed again Sept. 15, at which time additional raises might be given retroactive to July 1.

MORE THAN 150 parents, teachers and principals attended the Dist. 59 board meeting to voice their concern over a current conflict between the superintendent and district principals. Gloria Casper spoke up.

Erviti presently receives $34,182 plus a host of fringe benefits. His increase will bring him up to $35,891. Last year the board voted him an 8 per cent pay raise in the midst of another controversy and rumored attempts by some on the board to dump him. His contract runs through July, 1976.

THE MEETING was the last for two board members, President Allen Sparks and Poklacki. Two new board members, Paul Kucharski and Avis Wold, are running for the board unopposed and will presumably take office at the next board meeting.

The majority of those at the meeting asked that the board intervene for a quick resolution of the problem between principals and Erviti. Some either in person or through letters read at the meeting, demanded Erviti's immediate dismissal.

A parent's charge that Erviti "has not been sensitive to our desires as taxpayers," brought a round of applause from the obviously partisan audience.

Another woman stood to add that "most of us are here because we've been run roughshod over by Dr. Erviti."

THROUGHOUT THE attacks Erviti sat silent, appeared unaffected, and did not comment on anything that was said. Erviti returned from a one-week vacation Monday and, at that time, told The Herald he would not comment on the conflict as he considered it an "administrative matter."

The parents' comments fairly well summed up the overall comments of those who spoke out at the meeting. Their concern wasn't with the budget development practice in the district or the "single text approach" — but dealt solely with Erviti.

It's possible the feeling of the board in the dispute might change noticeably at its next meeting, April 15, when both new board members take office. Both have called for board involvement to settle the matter quickly.

BOARD PRES. Allen Sparks chairs the explosive meeting — the last for the outgoing school board member who is not seeking reelection.

Waycinden fire contract approved by city council

The Des Plaines City Council approved a new contract with the Elk Grove Rural Fire Protection District for service to unincorporated Waycinden Park, but not without warning residents there the service will cost more in the future.

Fire service to the unincorporated island of homes on the city's west side will cost about $24,000. The new cost represents an increase of about 25 per cent in fees charged the district for serving about 510 homes in Waycinden Park, according to Ald. John Seitz (7th), chairman of the city council's fire and civil defense committee.

However, several aldermen raised objections to the new contract, stating that the fee should be much higher. The aldermen contended that on a per capita basis, Waycinden residents were paying about 50 per cent less for fire service.

Ald. Ewald Swanson (6th), lone dissenter in the final vote on the contract, said the residents should pay $37,500.

"IT LOOKS TO me like they are about 50 per cent low," Swanson said. Swanson argued that the levy charged for fire service does not pay the entire cost of the program.

"We also use general corporate funds and funds for the retirement program," he added.

Seitz explained that the fee was based on assessed valuation rather than population. He stated that using that criterion the neighborhood was probably paying close to its fair share.

He also noted that the total area which had been covered in past contracts with the Elk Grove District has been reduced by about 25 per cent through recent annexations. The city annexed a number of apartments near the intersection of Elmhurst and Algonquin roads last year which were previously served by the city, but paid for by the Elk Grove Rural Fire Protection District.

Seitz said one of the stipulations in the 1974 contract is an early review of information in preparation for the 1975 contract.

SEITZ SAID complete information regarding the assessed valuation for Waycinden Park was not available because the area is being reassessed.

While stating that he was satisfied with this year's contract, Ald. Alan Abrams (8th) said residents in the Waycinden Park Area should be aware the city may not be able to go on providing service forever.

"I think they will have to make some response in the future toward annexing to the city," Abrams said. City officials have met with leaders of the area's homeowner's association several times to discuss annexation, the issue has never been resolved.

Recent discussion on the topic was delayed until complete information relating to the privately owned water and sewer system is developed.

The water system has been a major stumbling block concerning annexation. THE SYSTEM IS owned by the Citizens' Utility Co. The city would have to purchase the system and the residents of the area would be required to pay for the system probably as a condition of annexation.

In other action, the city rejected a request from Ald. Richard Ward (8th) who urged the city extend its ambulance service to include Northwest Community Hospital in Arlington Heights and Alexian Brothers Medical Center in Elk Grove Village.

Ward contended that residents on the city's west side could reach those two hospitals quicker than either Holy Family Hospital or Lutheran General Hospital. The city ambulance service presently takes residents to the latter two hospitals for emergencies.

Seitz allowing the ambulances to travel to Northwest Community or Alexian Brothers would put the equipment out of service too long during return trips. He also noted if this extension was approved residents of the southeast portion of the city might want to be taken to Resurrection Hospital in nearby Chicago.

THE COUNCIL also approved a Class J Liquor License for the Isle of Man, Rand and River roads in Des Plaines which allow the lounge to remain open until 4 a.m.

The council rejected license requests from Bibs Pasta Spread at Algonquin and Wolf roads, Jakes Pizza on Lee Street, Muench Drugs on Lee Street and Edward J. Brown. Brown and Muench Drugs had sought package goods licenses.

Oakton convention backs Stern, Loska for board

by KATHERINE BOYCE

The Oakton Community College convention has given its vote of confidence to Stephen Loska and Rabbi Harold Stern as candidates to the college board of trustees.

Loska and Rabbi Stern are among four candidates running for two three-year terms on the board this year and were the only candidates to appear before the convention Monday. Both were found qualified by a majority of the 30 delegates present. Rabbi Stern received 28 votes and Loska received 23.

The convention is a caucus of 52 delegates from elementary and high school districts in the college district. It also includes two Oakton student delegates. Each year the convention screens candidates for the Oakton board and delegates recommend those they think qualified.

THE TWO OTHER candidates running for the board this year are John Prochaska from Park Ridge and Harriet Ritter from Morton Grove. According to Wallace Lieberman, chairman of the convention, nominating committee, Prochaska was not able to attend Monday's meeting and Mrs. Ritter refused to appear before the convention.

In his speech on delegates Rabbi Stern said Oakton's biggest task is to "attract the best caliber faculty and students." He defined "best students" as "students who want to learn" and the best college as "the one that enables him to learn."

High schools "cater to honor students," he said, but the community college is necessary for all high school students, "to enable these young people to

Some mortgages here will require flood insurance

The purchase of federally subsidized flood insurance has become a requirement for mortgage loans in some areas of the Northwest suburbs under a federal regulation that went into effect on March 2.

The insurance, available from most local insurance agents, must now be bought by owners of homes that lie in "special flood hazard areas" before those homes can be mortgaged by federally regulated banks and savings and loan associations.

Maps outlining special flood hazard areas, as defined by the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development, have been prepared for Arlington Heights, Des Plaines, Elk Grove Village, Mount Prospect, Palatine, Rolling Meadows and Wheeling.

Maps for Buffalo Grove, Hoffman Eslates and Schaumburg are being prepared and should be available by July.

In addition, more detailed hydrological studies of the 10 communities are planned to upgrade the current maps.

Hydrological study maps are already completed for Des Plaines and for Palatine.

THE NEW requirement necessitates purchase of the insurance for any new loan or modification of an existing loan on property designated as part of the special flood hazard area on the maps.

The requirement for purchase of the insurance applies not only to federally insured loans, but also to conventional financing according to Paul Downing, a senior vice president and secretary of Uptown Federal Savings and Loan Assn. of Chicago.

Downing explained the new requirement means a financial institution cannot grant a loan unless the insurance is purchased by the homeowner.

Copies of the maps delineating areas of local communities where the mortgage flood insurance requirement is in effect may be seen at local lending institutions or copies can be obtained by contacting State Farm Insurance Co. of Bloomington, Ill.

IN ADDITION to the residents buying the flood insurance because of the new mortgage requirement, an increasing number of Northwest suburbanites are also buying the insurance just for their own protection.

As of December, 1973 a total of 3,500 policies had been sold throughout Illinois, according to Ann Duker of the Illinois Department of Local Governmental Affairs.

Totals as of that date for local communities included 238 policies sold in Arlington Heights, 13 in Buffalo Grove, 58 in Des Plaines, 17 in Elk Grove Village, 14 in Hoffman Estates, 92 in Mount Prospect, 99 in Palatine, 14 in Schaumburg, 13 in Rolling Meadows and 26 in Wheeling.

HOWEVER, the state total for policies sold had risen to 6,800 at the end of March, Mrs. Duker said, indicating that local totals may be higher now.

Mrs. Duker explained that discrepancies in current maps which exclude many flood prone areas from the mortgage requirement will be corrected as more detailed maps are made for each community. The current maps are based on information from the U.S. Soil Conservation Service and on U.S. Geological Survey flood plain maps, she said.

Cost for the flood insurance under the federally subsidized program is a flat annual rate of 25 cents for each $100 of coverage on property damage and 35 cents for each $100 coverage on home contents.

Total cost at maximum coverage would be $122.50.

IN SOME communities, including only the Village of Palatine locally, additional insurance on both the structure of the home and the contents can be purchased. Rates for additional insurance in Palatine are 35 cents per $100 coverage on the structure and 45 cents per $100 coverage on the contents.

Each policy has a $200 deductible clause (or 2 per cent of the amount of loss, whichever is greater) that applies to both building and contents coverage.

Federal flood insurance is also available for multiple-family residential developments, businesses, municipal buildings, churches, hotels and motels.

School remodeling work will proceed

Remodeling work at two of the district junior highs Dempster and Grove, will proceed as originally planned, the board has decided.

The board discussed the possibility of reducing or completely abandoning remodeling at Dempster, due to the construction of a shopping center which backs up next to the school.

Board members wanted to consider the feasibility of improving the school which might prove to be in an undesirable location within the next four or five years.

Residents from the Dempster area argued that they didn't expect single family homes to go up on the property adjacent to the school and that the shopping center would not provide "that bad of an environment."

The administration had suggested the board reconsider the remodeling since declining enrollments might cause possible abandonment of the building in four years.

Work is expected to start this summer at both buildings. Construction is expected to take two years and will be limited to the summer months so as not to disturb classes.

Contracts with parks OK'd

Two joint contracts with the Elk Grove Park District were approved by the board.

One was for the joint use of Disney Pool adjoining Lively Junior High. The park district owns the pool, but uses school locker room facilities and utilities.

The school uses the pool during the day for physical education classes. A more specific agreement for cost-sharing has been worked out with the Park District paying a flat fee of about $4,000 per year.

The other contract approved dealt with the lease of the grounds of Dan Cook School, 711 Chelmsford Ln., Elk Grove Village. The lease allows the Park District to erect several pieces of playground equipment.

Still to be approved by the board is an agreement which would turn the schools over to the park district for after school programming. School groups requesting space after school would do so at the park district.

The board, through its building principals, wants to find out if such a move would cause major problems for school groups. The after-school park use of school buildings has been tested this year at the two Elk Grove Village Junior Highs and is said to have been successful.

School grounds going to dogs?

The school board, at the request of the Elk Grove Park District, has made a move to keep the school grounds from going to the dogs.

In a recent joint board meeting the park board asked the school board to take some action toward discouraging the walking of dogs on school property.

In some cases, the park district leases school grounds and has set up playground equipment. In others, the park property adjoining school property makes it difficult for the park district to enforce its ordinance prohibiting the walking of dogs on park property.

The board did not pass a specific motion prohibiting the walking of dogs on school grounds, but said it would seek to discourage the practice.

find themselves." It must serve all students whether they are honor students, average students, or adults returning to school, he said.

A community college is especially important for a woman who is tired of her "boring, prosaic, repetitive life at home." It can help her to "seek some kind of meaning in life," Rabbi Stern said.

RABBI STERN has been rabbi of the B'nai Emenah Congregation in Skokie for 15 years. A delegate asked him Monday if he would have time to devote to the college. "If you want to give a job to a busy man you'll find it gets done," he answered.

Loska, a resident of Des Plaines, was elected to the board of trustees in 1971. The incumbent told delegates, "I want to go on (the board) one more time and after that I want to move on to something else."

The next three years of the college are critical years, said Loska. They will be the "years to maturity" when the college will experience most of its growth.

Loska said he favors the board's choice of a permanent campus in Des Plaines because it is large and adequate for the potential growth in the district's student population. Loska said he thinks population projections for the area are too low. More multiple family housing will come into the area in the future which will produce more students than projected, he said.

THE DES PLAINES site "is the only good one available," he said, and "the only one of decent size." The fact that it is not centrally located in the college district is a disadvantage that will have to be accepted, he said. "It will be a disadvantage to some people, there's no hiding that," Loska said.

Delegates to the convention also elected their officers Monday. Next year's chairman is William Nigut, 9235 N. Karlov, Skokie, vice chairman is Jane Terwilliger, 715 Busse Hwy., Park Ridge, and secretary-treasurer is Barbara Balbirer, 6519 Trumbull, Lincolnwood.

DEBBIE VINIKOUR and Dave Gordon will appear this weekend in the Forest View High School production of "Plaza Suite," a comedy by Neil Simon. The play will be performed Thursday at 7:30 p.m. and Friday and Saturday at 8 p.m. at the school. Tickets are $1.50 for adults and $1 for students.

Oakton trustee facing drug rap resigns

Robert Gutschick, an Oakton Community College trustee who faces charges of allegedly selling LSD to undercover agents, Tuesday night resigned his board post.

Gutschick, 24, and Michael S. Jolly, 21,

Robert Gutschick

asked to resign by college officials at Oakton.

Gutschick's letter of resignation was read at the start of Tuesday night's regular board meeting. The board met in executive session prior to the open meeting. Gutschick was elected to the Oakton board in 1972 when he was a student there. He now attends Northwestern Illinois University in Chicago and lives in Morton Grove.

According to Niles police, who participated in the arrest, Gutschick and Jolly are charged with "delivering or sale of LSD and conspiracy to sell LSD." Gutschick was also charged with possession of marijuana. Bond was set at $7,500 and both men are scheduled to appear in the Niles branch of the Cook County Circuit Court April 23.

According to Oakton Pres. William Koehnline, Gutschick's seat on the board will have to be filled by appointment because the deadline has passed for placing the vacancy on the ballot in college elections April 13.

Stormy school board session

Erviti gets a 'compromise' 5% pay raise

by BOB GALLAS

The Dist. 59 Board of Education, in what is believed to be a compromise gesture, has given all administrators a 5 per cent raise effective July 1. The raise was approved despite a call from parents and present and future board members to table any action on Supt. James Erviti's contract until a controversy between Erviti and district principals is worked out.

The announcement of the pay hike followed a three-hour executive session of the board during which Erviti's contract was apparently discussed.

The superintendent receives a yearly contract review by the board. According to sources some board members were pushing this year to extend Erviti's contract one year and give him an 8 per cent pay raise. Apparently pressure from other board members, who wanted to freeze all administrative salaries until the principals-Erviti conflict is worked out, made the compromise necessary.

Prior to their lengthy closed-door session, which went past 3 a.m. yesterday, board members heard sharp criticism of Erviti from some of the 150 parents, teachers and principals who attended the session. Criticism was also leveled at the board, which many felt should get involved in settling the dispute immediately.

THE BOARD has officially maintained its policy is to stay informed, but not involved, until members are sure the problem cannot be worked out by Erviti and his principals.

In a letter to Erviti more than a month ago, the principals listed the concerns which included the superintendent's "demeaning" treatment of principals, the district's budget development practice and the "single-text approach" principals said seems to be the direction of the district.

The principals asked that a series of meetings be held to work out the differences.

The principals, many of whom indicated that the meetings were producing "little success," called for a renewed effort in working out the problems in a statement issued at Monday night's board meeting.

Since the principals' conflict with the administration was revealed by The Herald last week, support for them has come in from all directions including the Dist. 59 Teachers' Council, numerous parent groups and individuals.

Board members Judy Zanca and outgoing member Irwin Poklacki, called for the raises to be tabled but they were voted down, 5 to 2.

DIST. 59 SUPT. James Erviti listens attentively and silently as parents from the community call for his dismissal. Erviti had no comment.

Township will pay one-half Arlington Manor sewer cost

by JERRY THOMAS

Half the cost of an estimated $180,000 storm sewer project that will alleviate flooding in the Arlington Manor Subdivision in unincorporated Elk Grove Township, will be paid by township federal revenue-sharing money.

The rest of the funds must come from Manor residents' pockets or other agencies. Their share of the cost could be about $400 a lot.

The auditors Monday decided to use federal money to help solve the areas flooding problems.

Supervisor Richard Hall received the board of auditors' approval to earmark $90,000 for the sewer work and offer to share the cost with owners of the 224 lots in the subdivision.

THE SUBDIVISION a semi-developed area bounded by Arlington Heights Road on the west, Magnolia on the south, Douglas on the east and Cypress on the north, lies in a flood plain.

Its first residents did not suffer flooding until the area was built up and storm water courses were altered.

A soft-spoken housewife, Mrs. Bernard Sandner, represents a group of residents in the subdivision whose homes suffer the worst flooding. She said she has made repeated visits to the board of auditors and has contacted every agency imaginable for help.

The auditors' informal vote to offer financial help to manor subdivision came after she had left the meeting Monday and she was unavailable for comment yesterday.

MRS. SANDNER appeared before the auditors Monday to ask the boards help to act as watchdogs of further development in the area. She told the board a small shopping center was being considered for Arlington Heights Road bordering the manor subdivision and she was worried it might contribute to flooding.

Residents of the area also maintain a Arlington Heights storm water outlet at the subdivision's border sends floods of storm water in the subdivision during rain.

Mrs. Sandner said the township is the only agency that has listened to the areas complaint of flooding and then taken action.

Last year the township authorized an engineering study that recommended solutions to the flooding. The engineers recommended installing a storm sewer system that would take water from the Arlington Heights outfall and the area streets to a nearby Mount Prospect storm water line.

THE SOLUTION sounds simple, but carried an $180,000 price tag.

When Hall received the OK Monday to offer financial help to the manor residents, several members of the board worried about how the other half of the costs would be paid.

Auditors Walter Bartley and Larry Hintze said since the township has no power to impose assessments for such work, the residents must make voluntary payment.

"Although there are 224 lots in that area, not all of them are affected by flooding and some residents probably will refuse to pay the estimated $400 a lot share of costs," said Hintze.

Auditor Wayne Huk cautioned the board against taking hasty action. "We should weigh the issue. Is it right to spend so much and benefit only about 20 homes?" he asked.

Hall said the whole area, not just those homes that flood extensively, suffers when flood water covers the subdivision.

"SEPTIC FIELDS can contaminate wells in the area and make the problem a severe one for all the residents," Hall said.

The auditors set an April 23, 8 p.m. meeting between residents of Arlington Manor and the township in the township building at 2400 S. Arlington Heights Rd., Arlington Heights.

Hall said the township cannot impose a tax on manor residents for the storm sewer work. "We paid for the engineering study and have a solution to the flooding and are willing to hear part of the cost. The rest is up to the residents," Hall said.

Creek dredging planned to alleviate flooding

A debris-filled section of Higgins Creek in the Roppolo Subdivision north of Landmeier Road and east of Ill. Rte. 83 in Elk Grove Township will be dredged and widened in an attempt to alleviate severe flooding.

Elk Grove Township auditors Monday, agreed to seek bids for the estimated $2,500 dredging job. Cleaning of the creek, which accepts storm water from the area, was proposed as a partial solution to alleviate subdivision flooding.

Area residents are suing developers near the subdivision for altering storm water flow and have sought help from the township as a temporary solution to the flooding.

Supervisor Richard Hall said Highway Comr. Alfred Eteil inspected the area and found Higgins Creek to be so glutted with debris that water was backing out of the creek into a drainage ditch in the subdivision.

Hall said the drainage ditch, designed to channel storm water into the creek, not accepts storm water from the overflowing creek flooding the subdivision.

Broken gas line

A broken gas pipe halted business in the Pioneer Electric Plant at 1500 Greenleaf St., Elk Grove Village, for a short time Monday afternoon.

Elk Grove Village Fire Department vehicles were called to the scene at 4:43 p.m. after a lift truck broke an overhead gas line.

Firemen shut off the gas supply and ventilated the building.

Residents of the subdivision are also concerned about the Metropolitan Sanitary District's plans to develop an area directly north of the subdivision on the other side of Higgins Road.

The auditors offered to arrange a meeting between the residents and Des Plaines Alderman Richard Ward. According to auditor Bernard Lee, Alderman Ward is a noted expert on the districts plans for the area and will explain the facilities probable impact on Roppolo subdivision. No date was set for the meeting.

Driver ticketed following crash

Mrs. Katherine Bala, 51, of 1279 Edgewood St., Bensenville was ticketed for improper lane usage by Elk Grove Village Police Monday, following a two-car auto accident at Arlington Heights and Higgins Roads.

According to police, Mrs. Bala lost control of her auto at the intersection and entered an oncoming lane of traffic on Higgins, colliding with an auto driven by Mrs. Shirley Zaberda, 602 Berkshire St., Schaumburg.

Mrs. Zaberda's son Mark, 12, a passenger in her auto suffered a cut left cheek. The boy and Mrs. Bala, who injured her leg, were taken to Alexian Brothers Medical Center for treatment by Elk Grove Village Fire Department ambulance, treated and released.

Both autos sustained extensive right front and side damage.

Total cost at maximum coverage would be $122.50.

IN SOME communities, including only the Village of Palatine locally, additional insurance on both the structure of the home and the contents can be purchased. Rates for additional insurance in Palatine are 35 cents per $100 coverage on the structure and 45 cents per $100 coverage on the contents.

Each policy has a $200 deductible clause (or 2 per cent of the amount of loss, whichever is greater) that applies to both building and contents coverage.

Federal flood insurance is also available for multiple-family residential developments, businesses, municipal buildings, churches, hotels and motels.

Dist. 59 wrapup

School remodeling work will proceed

Remodeling work at two of the district junior highs Dempster and Grove, will proceed as originally planned, the board has decided.

The board discussed the possibility of reducing or completely abandoning remodeling at Dempster, due to the construction of a shopping center which backs up next to the school.

Board members wanted to consider the feasibility of improving the school which might prove to be in an undesirable location within the next four or five years.

Residents from the Dempster area argued that they didn't expect single family homes to go up on the property adjacent to the school and that the shopping center would not provide "that bad of an environment."

The administration had suggested the board reconsider the remodeling since declining enrollments might cause possible abandonment of the building in four years.

Work is expected to start this summer at both buildings. Construction is expected to take two years and will be limited to the summer months so as not to disturb classes.

Contracts with parks OK'd

Two joint contracts with the Elk Grove Park District were approved by the board.

One was for the joint use of Disney Pool adjoining Lively Junior High. The park district owns the pool, but uses school locker room facilities and utilities.

The school uses the pool during the day for physical education classes. A more specific agreement for cost-sharing has been worked out with the Park District paying a flat fee of about $4,000 per year.

The other contract approved dealt with the lease of the grounds of Dan Cook School, 711 Chelmsford Ln., Elk Grove Village. The lease allows the Park District to erect several pieces of playground equipment.

Still to be approved by the board is an agreement which would turn the schools over to the park district for after school programming. School groups requesting space after school would do so at the park district.

The board, through its building principals, wants to find out if such a move would cause major problems for school groups. The after-school park use of school buildings has been tested this year at the two Elk Grove Village Junior Highs and is said to have been successful.

School grounds going to dogs?

The school board, at the request of the Elk Grove Park District, has made a move to keep the school grounds from going to the dogs.

In a recent joint board meeting the park board asked the school board to take some action toward discouraging the walking of dogs on school property.

In some cases, the park district leases school grounds and has set up playground equipment. In others, the park property adjoining school property makes it difficult for the park district to enforce its ordinance prohibiting the walking of dogs on park property.

The board did not pass a specific motion prohibiting the walking of dogs on school grounds, but said it would seek to discourage the practice.

6th graders may be bused next year

Sixth graders from Schaumburg Township Dist. 54 elementary schools may be bused to junior high schools next year to allow kindergarten students to attend schools within walking distance of their homes.

Students from Blackhawk, Campanelli, Lakeview and Muir elementary schools may be bused to the junior high school within their district next year. These boundary changes will be discussed by the Dist. 54 building and sites committee at 7 p.m. Thursday at Helen Keller Junior High School.

The boundary changes have been proposed because of parent demands concerning the busing of kindergarten children, according to Milton Derr, associate superintendent.

Previously, the administration had followed the general policy of busing kindergarten students rather than older students because it was believed that kindergarten students should not walk distances over one-half mile, Derr said.

Only students living more than 1½ miles from school are bused.

HOWEVER, after the recent fatality of Robyn Bradshaw, a kindergarten student killed while being bused home, parents have indicated they prefer busing for older students, he said.

To accommodate the additional kindergarten students at the four elementary schools, the administration has proposed that sixth grade students be bused.

Currently, three sixth grade classes are bused to Addams Junior High from Campanelli; two more classes would be bused next year.

All sixth graders from Blackhawk and Muir would be bused to Eisenhower Junior High under the proposed plan and about 12 sixth graders would be bused from Lakeview to Helen Keller Junior High.

The additional space is available in the junior high schools because of the opening of the fourth junior high, Eisenhower, within the past year.

They grow old and are abandoned

Exotic pets' best friend? It certainly is not man

by JOHN MAES

The innocent little spider monkey, the mysterious iguana lizard and the colorful talkative parrot and mynah bird — they all looked so cute in the pet store that they had to be bought.

They're unique, and conversation pieces to say the least. The kids and everyone love them — until they begin to mature, become obnoxious, untidy and smelly — especially during mating time.

That's when pets, domestic as well as the exotic types become a potential monkey wrench in the environmental works, according to naturalists and county forest preserve officials.

THE PET OWNER does what he thinks is the easiest and best thing for the new unwanted animal and dumps it off in the woods, thinking natural animal instincts will allow it to survive.

"But that's not a very smart thing to do," according to Chet Ryndak, a naturalist at River Trails Nature Center in Wheeling Township.

"Some abandoned animals can make it for a short while in the forest preserve but many are killed," he said. "Pets kept in captivity have lost the ability to get their own food, they have to be human-fed."

Although statistics are incomplete on the numbers and kinds of abandoned pets, Ryndak said unwanted cats, dogs, birds, goats and even snakes and other reptiles not native to this area have been seen roaming the woods near the center.

AVAILABLE FIGURES showed that over the course of a year, some 450 species of non-native wildlife were found in forest preserve areas.

RIVER TRAILS Nature Center naturalist holds two European Ferrets (polecats). Many non-native species roam forest preserves.

He said animals turned loose in the woods will inevitably starve because they are not equipped to compete successfully with the wildlife native to forest preserve areas for food and shelter.

Robert Dorsett of the Cook County Forest Preserve District conservation department agreed that too many pet owners mistakenly assume an unwanted pet can survive anywhere.

"Part of it is the climate," said Dorsett. "Some can't hack the weather, the food is different, they can't find shelter when they need it or a mate."

ANOTHER PROBLEM, said Dorsett, is that pets not native to the forest preserve might bring diseases and parasites and spread them among the other animals who live there.

"The preserve is a unique type of environment that houses its own particular population of occupants that are perfectly compatible and don't need diseases or the competition of other animals," Dorsett said.

Although Dorsett said there is no immediate danger to ecological balances in forest preserve areas, he said people should be aware of the problems in buying exotic-type pets.

"The first thing to consider when buying a pet," he said, "is the possibility of it becoming too big and hard to handle. They should consider the future of the pet."

Instead of turning pets loose in the woods, owners can give their animals to zoos or animal shelters, said Dorsett.

Ryndak said the nature center can take in some animals that could survive in the woods but the more exotic type pets cannot be cared for.

HE SAID distraught pet owners have tried to turn in such animals as boa constrictors, monkeys, mynah birds and parrots. Someone even had a lion he wanted to get rid of.

Ryndak said people have turned unwanted dogs and cats loose and about five or six are found roaming near the center each year. The environs of the forest preserve are extremely harsh on dogs and cats.

"They're not friendly at all and quite mean, but no one has been bitten yet," Ryndak said.

He said dogs and cats found running wild in the woods usually have to be destroyed.

THE POSSIBILITY of another problem exists in forest preserve lakes and ponds where minnows and goldfish are dumped by unthinking anglers.

Minnows are a highly reproductive fish and may crowd other fish species and cut into available food supplies while goldfish can make it hard for gamefish to get oxygen.

Relative to the scavenger carp, Ryndak said they feed off the bottom of the lake, digging in the muddy bottom in search of food.

The process, called rotting, churns mud into the water and could cause difficulty for other fish.

Pet dumping has not developed into a major problem, said Dorsett, "but there's enough of it to warrant some consideration for the animals in the preserve and the native wildlife."

Salt Creek area earmarked as flood hazard

An area several hundred feet on either side of Salt Creek has been designated as a special flood-hazard area by the Department of Housing and Urban Development, Federal Insurance Administration.

The flood area, which has been plotted in a special flood hazard boundary map for the village, begins at Arlington Heights Road on the north side of the village and runs along Brantwood Avenue on the west and Cypress Lane on the east, ending at Devon Avenue on the south.

Most of the area is vacant but some residential streets are in the flood hazard area. They include Cypress Lane from Kennedy Boulevard to Placid Way; a small portion of the eastern ends of Brookhaven Drive, Pleasant Drive and Placid; one block of Brantwood from Eden to Carlisle; the western loop of Essex; and one block areas of Clearmont Drive, Braemar Drive and Kenilworth Avenue from Essex to Carlisle.

Residents in this area would be required to buy flood insurance in order to secure a new mortgage, according to federal law.

As of December, 1973, 17 persons in the village had applied for this insurance.

Got a question about township?

Elk Grove Township residents get an opportunity to ask questions about township government of its auditors at the 8 p.m. Tuesday Annual Town Meeting.

Township Supervisor Richard Hall said all Elk Grove Township residents have a voice during the annual meeting in the township offices at 2400 S. Arlington Heights Rd., Arlington Heights.

In contrast to the board of auditors regular monthly sessions at which the supervisor presides, residents will elect a moderator to preside over the town meeting.

The town clerk will present the budget for review.

There is no set agenda to the meeting and it is traditionally a time for township residents to air complaints, make requests or pass on compliments to its board of elected officials.

Correction

The High School Dist. 211 discipline committee will meet at 3:30 p.m. Friday in the district administration building, not on Thursday as reported in Monday's Herald.

The committee is made up of administrators and board members from the district. It has been formed to study the school district's discipline policies. Supt. Richard Kotze has said the meeting will be open to parents, teachers and students.

Township wants intercoms for office-garage

The local telephone book pages will provide the list of firms from which Elk Grove Township will seek bids for a communications system for its offices.

Supervisor Richard Hall said he has prepared a list of specifications for an intercom system for the township facility and garage at 2400 S. Arlington Heights Road, Arlington Heights.

"I'll send it to all businesses listed in the local phone book and get formal bids for a system we need," said Hall.

The supervisor said he is looking for a system that will have eight master stations on every desk in the office and speakers in the garage.

"We waste a terrible lot of time in these offices running from room to room, office to office, to answer telephones and other requests," said Hall.

The system will offer security to workers who are in the building alone late at night also, said Hall.

'Communications' a major problem: school candidates

by REGINA OEHLER

Communications was cited as a major problem facing school districts by candidates for elementary, high school and junior college board seats at a candidates night on Monday.

Seventeen candidates vying for school board seats in Palatine-Rolling Meadows Dist. 15, High School Dist. 211 and 214 and William Rainey Harper College Dist. 512 spoke on the major problems facing their respective districts at the Candidates' Night sponsored by the Palatine Township League of Women Voters and Northwest Suburban Council of PTAs.

Communications was the common problem mentioned by nearly all of the candidates. Most of the candidates criticized the school districts for not making a bigger effort to keep parents informed of district events.

"Far too many people are guilty of non-involvement, especially in the education of their children," said Dist. 15 candidate Robert Bliss. He wants to improve involvement by limiting tenure on a school board to two three-year terms and encouraging more people to run for the board.

BLISS SAID former board members would provide a well-informed core of interested people who would be involved in school board meetings and more individuals would become involved in the school board if tenure were limited.

With seven people running for the three school board seats up for election in Dist. 15, the candidates didn't deny there were people interested in the school board, but they were worried about the parents not running for school board seats.

"Many parents don't know how to go about communicating with the school board," said another Dist. 15 candidate, Warren Franczyk. "It's the job of the board to go to these people," he said, door-to-door if necessary.

High School Dist. 214 and 211 each have two incumbents running for the two available seats. No challengers had signed up to dispute their positions.

JACK MATTHEWS, running for the Dist. 214 school board, said he was troubled by the apparent lack of concern among citizens. Jean Fister, running for the Dist. 211 board, called for community input.

All three high school candidates who submitted statements or spoke Monday night said one of the biggest problems facing the high schools was in gearing education to fit the needs of the youngsters — those who are going on to college, those heading straight towards work and those with special emotional or physical problems.

Suggestions included expanding to include classes that could lead to college credit and work-study programs in specific skills needed in the community at the time.

THE TWO MOST commonly reiterated problems voiced by Harper College candidates were the concept of a second campus and the lack of communications with district residents.

Candidate Robert Bromley said that Harper's first campus should be totally complete before plans for a second campus were considered. Donald Payton, another candidate, said that a second campus would involve not only a second facility, but also a second administration, security force and maintenance force.

"It's an extravagance the taxpayers of the district should not have to pay for," he said. He suggested land adjacent to Harper be purchased instead.

THE MOST pressing problem at the campus is communications, according to candidate Judith Troehler. She said that presently the only set of input came from the administration and that board members did not have the time to research many questions thoroughly on their own. More input, she said, would give the board more data on which to make decisions.

"The appalling lack of awareness by many citizens of what the college is doing is at least partly attributable to the college board," said Payton.

"I think the college must relate to the community — relate and be aware of the needs of the people that use it," said another candidate, Ralph Walberg.

Local grade school hopefuls cite own special problems

Indifference, lack of leadership, lack of communication, busing, boundaries and buildings were some of the problems voiced by candidates for the Palatine-Rolling Meadows Dist. 15 school board at a Candidate's Night on Monday.

The seven candidates vying for the three available school board seats spoke for four minutes each on what they considered the main problems in the district. Elections are April 13.

For the most part, criticism seemed soft spoken and praise balanced many of the problems.

The most generally voiced problems were lack of communication, transportation and school boundaries.

Briefly, the problems mentioned by the Dist. 15 candidates are:

Robert Bliss: He cited transportation, the teacher aide program, the process of beginning new programs and communication as "concerns." He offered no immediate solution to these problems, adding that he did not want to make any promise he is not sure of keeping. He did suggest board members get out and visit with constituents, door-to-door if necessary.

Everett Charlier, incumbent: He said the major "challenges" to the district were finances, curriculum finances and transportation. He centered his remarks around the difficulty of looking into the future and determining when and where to build new schools. Charlier, head of the board's new site committee, said the district has done fairly well in its projections.

Included in his praise was the two-year wait after money was approved for building a new school before starting plans for the facility. The new school is being planned for the southern part of the district, he said.

J. Leslie Ehringer, incumbent: He said the district has achieved an "envious" position in the state of Illinois for its educational program. As improvements, he cited the establishment of separate junior high schools, early childhood education, a guidance program, resource centers, bilingual education, a drug program, career education, involvement in a cooperative of ten area school districts and improving programs in art, music and physical education.

Warren Franczyk: He said the most pressing problem in the district was to recognize and deal with the small crisis in the homes of non-participating parents or the silent majority. He said many don't participate in the school district for various reasons, but this means the board should get out to meet them, not vice versa.

Margie Kutz: "The most pressing problem facing our school district is indifference and lack of leadership," she said. She suggested forcing staff members to be honest, enforcing a strict nepotism rule and having each teacher fill out a weekly work plan that principals and supervisors check. She also suggested that teachers correct papers, maintenance in the schools be improved and that soap be put in the bathrooms, so that youngsters won't have to eat lunch with dirty hands.

Howard Meadors, incumbent: He said that the school district had a number of problems including transportation, school boundaries, site acquisition and special education. His comments, however, centered around financing of the school system.

"This has been a problem and probably will continue to be a problem," he said. He added that the school district is receiving more state money under the new state aid formula and that the school board should be careful in deciding to ask for more money from taxpayers.

No minibus for Meadows senior citizens

A minibus service being provided for senior citizens in Palatine Township will not be available to the elderly in Rolling Meadows.

The Palatine Township Council on the Aged, which sponsors the service, has withdrawn its application for a license to operate in the city. The license is required by the city in order to permit the bus system, which began Feb. 19, to operate within the city limits.

The decision means Rolling Meadows senior citizens will not be able to use the service in the city nor will Palatine residents be able to use the service to get to destinations in Rolling Meadows.

COUNCIL COORDINATOR Joyce Lennox said Tuesday the council's board of directors decided to no longer pursue the licensing application because the procedure would take too much time.

"I had talked to them (the city) and they indicated I would have to go through four committees to get it," Mrs. Lennox said. "I just don't have the time for that, so I talked it over with the board and they agreed to drop it."

The bus service provides twice weekly transportation on an appointment basis to Palatine Township residents 60 years of age and older. Transportation within Palatine Township, excluding Rolling Meadows, or to the Arlington Heights Social Security Office, costs 25 cents for a one-way trip.

Mayor Roland Meyer said Tuesday he had been notified by Police Chief Lewis

Trustee may be named soon

The appointment of a new Palatine trustee is expected next Monday.

A list of eight candidates who have indicated a willingness to serve on the village board if appointed has been compiled and Village Pres. Wendell E. Jones said yesterday he has narrowed his choice to two or three individuals.

The new trustee was originally expected to be named last week, but was delayed because of the inability of the board to reach a consensus.

"The appointment requires the advice and consent of the village board and right now I am getting a lot more advice than I am consent," Jones explained last week.

Jones said he had screened a list of 35 to 40 possible appointees suggested to him down to the eight now under consideration.

AMONG CANDIDATES believed under consideration are Phil Stern, 448 Warwick, an assistant Republican campaign manager last April and chairman of the new Palatine Advisory Board; Phil Chouinard, 614 N. Wren, a recent appointee to the village zoning board of appeals and also a GOP campaign director, and Warren Collesser, 203 Richards, head of the 1973 GOP candidate screening committee.

Other names that have been mentioned as possibilities are Glen Ann Jicha, P. T. diLauro, James Humphrey, Ed Lewis, Tom Coy and Michael Frances.

Jones had stated he wanted his appointment to have the unanimous support of the village board, but now says he would "prefer" to have the unanimous support of the board.

The appointee will fill a vacancy on the board created by the resignation of Clayton W. Brown. Brown, an unsuccessful candidate for village president last April, resigned after seven years on the board, charging the present administration with "destroying the village."

The new board member will complete the remaining year of Brown's term and be eligible to run for reelection in April, 1975, to a full four-year term.

Some mortgages here will require flood insurance

The purchase of federally subsidized flood insurance has become a requirement for mortgage loans in some areas of the Northwest suburbs under a federal regulation that went into effect on March 2.

The insurance, available from most local insurance agents, must now be bought by owners of homes that lie in "special flood hazard areas" before those homes can be mortgaged by federally regulated banks and savings and loan associations.

Maps outlining special flood hazard areas, as defined by the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development, have been prepared for Arlington Heights, Des Plaines, Elk Grove Village, Mount Prospect, Palatine, Rolling Meadows and Wheeling.

Maps for Buffalo Grove, Hoffman Estates and Schaumburg are being prepared and should be available by July.

In addition, more detailed hydrological studies of the 10 communities are planned to upgrade the current maps. Hydrological study maps are already completed for Des Plaines and for Palatine.

THE NEW requirement necessitates purchase of the insurance for any new loan or modification of an existing loan on property designated as part of the special flood hazard area on the maps.

The requirement for purchase of the insurance applies not only to federally insured loans, but also to conventional financing according to Paul Downing, a senior vice president and secretary of Uptown Federal Savings and Loan Assn. of Chicago.

Downing explained the new requirement means a financial institution cannot grant a loan unless the insurance is purchased by the homeowner.

Copies of the maps delineating areas of local communities where the mortgage flood insurance requirement is in effect may be seen at local lending institutions or copies can be obtained by contacting State Farm Insurance Co. of Bloomington, Ill.

IN ADDITION to the residents buying the flood insurance because of the new mortgage requirement, an increasing number of Northwest suburbanites are also buying the insurance just for their own protection.

As of December, 1973 a total of 3,500 policies had been sold throughout Illinois, according to Ann Duker of the Illinois Department of Local Governmental Affairs.

Totals as of that date for local communities included 238 policies sold in Arlington Heights, 13 in Buffalo Grove, 58 in Des Plaines, 17 in Elk Grove Village, 14 in Hoffman Estates, 92 in Mount Prospect, 99 in Palatine, 14 in Schaumburg, 13 in Rolling Meadows and 26 in Wheeling.

HOWEVER, THE state total for policies sold had risen to 6,000 at the end of March, Mrs. Duker said, indicating that local totals may be higher now.

Mrs. Duker explained that discrepancies in current maps which exclude many flood prone areas from the mortgage requirement will be corrected as more detailed maps are made for each community. The current maps are based on information from the U.S. Soil Conservation Service and on U.S. Geological Survey flood plain maps, she said.

Cost for the flood insurance under the federally subsidized program is a flat annuual rate of 25 cents for each $100 of coverage on property damage and 35 cents for each $100 coverage on home contents.

Total cost at maximum coverage would be $122.50.

IN SOME communities, including only the Village of Palatine locally, additional insurance on both the structure of the home and the contents can be purchased. Rates for additional insurance in Palatine are 35 cents per $100 coverage on the structure and 45 cents per $100 coverage on the contents.

Each policy has a $200 deductible clause (or 2 per cent of the amount of loss, whichever is greater) that applies to both building and contents coverage.

Federal flood insurance is also available for multiple-family residential developments, businesses, municipal buildings, churches, hotels and motels.

Village board wrapup

Village employees to get 10% raises

Employees in the Village of Palatine will receive 10 per cent salary increases, effective May 1 but merit increases will have to wait a little longer.

The Palatine Village Board has unofficially frozen all employees' job classifications until a salary classification study can be conducted by the U. S. Civil Service Commission. Prior to authorizing the study, the board will be seeking a cost estimate on the study from the U. S. Civil Service Commission.

Trustee Richard W. Fonte indicated he felt the village's 33 salary classifications were too many for the size of the village and should be reduced.

The classification study will help insure that people are slotted in the right pay grade, said Fonte.

"The more you allow equities to exist the more you have morale problems," he continued. "It's the principal of equal pay for equal work."

The board expects to have salary classification study completed by June 1 and all changes in job classifications resulting in higher pay would be retroactive to May 1.

Village board to expand?

Expansion of the Palatine Village Board to possibly a nine-member body is under consideration by the present board. The board has referred the expansion question to its administration, finance and legislation committee for study.

The board decided to investigate adding more trustee seats to the board after the Illinois Supreme Court ruled the expansion of the Arlington Heights Village Board to a 9-member body was legal under home rule powers.

Voters in Arlington Heights approved the expansion in 1972 and also approved changing the clerk's post from an elected to an appointed position.

Calendar to be prepared

Village Mgr. Anton H. Harwig has been directed by the Palatine Village Board to prepare a yearly calendar commencing May 1, the start of the new fiscal year.

The board also voted to observe the May 27 Memorial Day holiday and reschedule its board meeting to May 28.

Appointments to health, environment boards OK'd

Appointments to both the new Palatine Board of Health and restructured Environmental Control Board were approved by the Palatine Village Board Monday.

Richard Pankey was appointed chairman of the five-member board of health.

Free ice skating night Saturday

Residents of the Salt Creek Park District may take part Saturday in a free ice skating night at the Rolling Meadows Sports Complex. The free skating will take place from 8 to 10 p.m. Skates may be rented at the complex.

Children must be accompanied by an adult for the evening. Persons interested in attending should sign up at the district office, 530 S. Williams St., Palatine, or call 259-6880.

Case that the license application had been dropped. Meyer had indicated in February when application was made that he might not sign a license because of questions concerning the legality of spending federal revenue sharing funds for the service.

THE TOWNSHIP service is being subsidized by revenue sharing funds. The Illinois League of Women Voters has challenged the right of Illinois townships to use revenue sharing funds for such transportation uses in light of an opinion by Illinois Atty. Gen. William Scott stating that a township's spending powers are limited.

Both Wheeling and Elk Grove townships have indicated they will take the matter to federal court soon for a ruling.

Mrs. Lennox said the council had been willing to pay the city licensing fee of about $25 and that the Davidmeyer Bus Service, which operates the buses, had been willing to go through the required inspections for licensing. She said, however, that a lack of time to proceed

Also appointed to the board were Dr. George Beatty, Dr. Alan Krakora, John Wagner and Dr. William Ramser, medical consultant.

The board of health will be primarily concerned with health care delivery, communicable disease control, public health and education and enforcement in other community health related fields.

Reappointed to the Environmental Control Board were James Takahashi, Frank Boucek, William Rietz and Charles Jeffries. Also appointed was Robert Jewett. There are still two vacant seats on the ECB.

The ECB, which will be headed by Takahashi, will direct its attention to the natural environment including all forms of pollution, solid waste, water resources and land use.

The appointments of Rabbi Hillel Gamoran and Kent Bradley to the Palatine Human Relations Commission were also approved by the board.

through the required city channels prompted the decision to drop the application request.

She said the council has received some calls from Rolling Meadows senior citizens who have inquired about using the service. The callers have been instructed to contact Meyer, she said.

IF THE CITY wishes to start the service at a later date, Mrs. Lennox said the council would reconsider extending the service to the city. "If they want the service they can call us," she said.

City officials are studying plans to develop city-sponsored bus service for residents Claude G. Luisada, president of Metron Inc., which operates bus services in Arlington Heights and Buffalo Grove, has appeared before the city council and a council committee with a proposal to manage a bus service for the city.

The proposal is currently being taken under advisement by the council. Meyer has indicated that even if Luisada's service is not started, the city may try to devise some type of transit service in the near future.

Easter egg hunt Saturday

An Easter egg hunt will be held Saturday for children living in the Hunting Ridge subdivision.

The hunt will begin at 1:30 p.m. at the home of Dean Yount, 1011 Skylark Dr., Palatine. Children 1 to 10 years old are invited. Prizes will be given and the Easter Bunny will be present.

Council on the Aged drops plan

City's elderly won't receive township minibus service

A minibus service being provided for senior citizens in Palatine Township will not be available to the elderly in Rolling Meadows.

The Palatine Township Council on the Aged, which sponsors the service, has withdrawn its application for a license to operate in the city. The license is required by the city in order to permit the bus system, which began Feb. 19, to operate within the city limits.

The decision means Rolling Meadows senior citizens will not be able to use the service in the city nor will Palatine residents be able to use the service to get to destinations in Rolling Meadows.

COUNCIL COORDINATOR Joyce Lennox said Tuesday the council's board of directors decided to no longer pursue the licensing application because the procedure would take too much time.

"I had talked to them (the city) and they indicated I would have to go through four committees to get it," Mrs. Lennox said. "I just don't have the time for that, so I talked it over with the board and they agreed to drop it."

The bus service provides twice weekly transportation on an appointment basis to Palatine Township residents 60 years of age and older. Transportation within Palatine Township, excluding Rolling Meadows, or to the Arlington Heights Social Security Office, costs 25 cents for a one-way trip.

Mayor Roland Meyer said Tuesday he had been notified by Police Chief Lewis Case that the license application had been dropped. Meyer had indicated in February when application was made that he might not sign a license because of questions concerning the legality of spending federal revenue sharing funds for the service.

THE TOWNSHIP service is being subsidized by revenue sharing funds. The Illinois League of Women Voters has challenged the right of Illinois townships to use revenue sharing funds for such transportation uses in light of an opinion by Illinois Atty. Gen. William Scott stating that a township's spending powers are limited.

Both Wheeling and Elk Grove townships have indicated they will take the matter to federal court soon for a ruling.

Mrs. Lennox said the council had been willing to pay the city licensing fee of about $25 and that the Davidsmeyer Bus Service, which operates the buses, had been willing to go through the required inspections for licensing. She said, however, that a lack of time to proceed through the required city channels prompted the decision to drop the application request.

She said the council has received some calls from Rolling Meadows senior citizens who have inquired about using the service. The callers have been instructed to contact Meyer, she said.

IF THE CITY wishes to start the service at a later date, Mrs. Lennox said the council would reconsider extending the service to the city. "If they want the service they can call us," she said.

City officials are studying plans to develop city-sponsored bus service for residents. Claude G. Luisada, president of Metron Inc., which operates bus services in Arlington Heights and Buffalo Grove, has appeared before the city council and a council committee with a proposal to manage a bus service for the city.

The proposal is currently being taken under advisement by the council. Meyer has indicated that even if Luisada's service is not started, the city may try to devise some type of transit service in the near future.

A REAR-END collision on an otherwise safe highway caused some problems for spring drivers who took advantage of Tuesday's balmy spring temperatures. Forecasts predict that showers may dampen roads today.

School board candidates' echo:

'Communications' a problem

by REGINA OEHLE

Local grade school hopefuls cite own special problems

Indifference, lack of leadership, lack of communication, busing, boundaries and buildings were some of the problems voiced by candidates for the Palatine-Rolling Meadows Dist. 15 school board at a Candidate's Night on Monday.

The seven candidates vying for the three available school board seats spoke for four minutes each on what they considered the main problems in the district. Elections are April 13.

For the most part, criticism seemed soft spoken and praise balanced many of the problems.

The most generally voiced problems were lack of communication, transportation and school boundaries.

Briefly, the problems mentioned by the Dist. 15 candidates are:

Robert Bliss: He cited transportation, the teacher aide program, the process of beginning new programs and communication as "concerns." He offered no immediate solution to these problems, adding that he did not want to make any promise he is not sure of keeping. He did suggest board members get out and visit with constituents, door-to-door if necessary.

Everett Chartier, incumbent: He said the major "challenges" to the district were finances, curriculum finances and transportation. He centered his remarks around the difficulty of looking into the future and determining when and where to build new schools. Chartier, head of the board's new site committee, said the district has done fairly well in its projections.

Included in his praise was the two-year wait after money was approved for building a new school before starting plans for the facility. The new school is being planned for the southern part of the district, he said.

J. Leslie Ehringer, incumbent: He said the district has achieved an "envious" position in the state of Illinois for its educational program. As improvements, he cited the establishment of separate junior high schools, early childhood education, a guidance program, resource centers, bilingual education, a drug program, career education, involvement in a cooperative of ten area school districts and improving programs in art, music and physical education.

Warren Franczyk: He said the most pressing problem in the district was to recognize and deal with the small crisis in the homes of non-participating parents or the silent majority. He said many don't participate in the school district for various reasons, but this means the board should get out to meet them, not vice versa.

Margie Katz: "The most pressing problem facing our school district is indifference and lack of leadership," she said. She suggested forcing staff members to be honest, enforcing a strict nepotism rule and having each teacher fill out a weekly work plan that principals and supervisors check. She also suggested that teachers correct papers, maintenance in the schools be improved and that soap be put in the bathrooms, so that youngsters won't have to eat lunch with dirty hands.

Howard Meadows, incumbent: He said that the school district had a number of problems including transportation, school boundaries, site acquisition and special education. His comments, however, centered around financing of the school system.

"This has been a problem and probably will continue to be a problem," he said. He added that the school district is receiving more state money under the new state aid formula and that the school board should be careful in deciding to ask for more money from taxpayers.

A. Rosamon Von Mayr: "Our most pressing problem is educational facilities," she said, adding that there was a great discrepancy between the older and the newer schools in the district. She suggested a cost study to determine how much more it costs to run the old schools as opposed to the new ones.

She also suggested that changes should be made to decrease the amount of time students spend on buses, that special education children start classes the same time as the rest of the students, that two instead of three junior high school children be assigned to a bus seat and that activity buses be initiated for junior high schools.

Communications was cited as a major problem facing school districts by candidates for elementary, high school and junior college board seats at a candidates night on Monday.

Seventeen candidates vying for school board seats in Palatine-Rolling Meadows Dist. 15, High School Dist. 211 and 214 and William Rainey Harper College Dist. 512 spoke on the major problems facing their respective districts at the Candidates' Night sponsored by the Palatine Township League of Women Voters and Northwest Suburban Council of PTAs.

Communications was the common problem mentioned by nearly all of the candidates. Most of the candidates criticized the school districts for not making a bigger effort to keep parents informed of district events.

"Far too many people are guilty of non-involvement, especially in the education of their children," said Dist. 15 candidate Robert Bliss. He wants to improve involvement by limiting tenure on a school board to two three-year terms and encouraging more people to run for the board.

BLISS SAID former board members would provide a well-informed core of interested people who would be involved in school board meetings and more individuals would become involved in the school board if tenure were limited.

With seven people running for the three school board seats up for election in Dist. 15, the candidates didn't deny there were people interested in the school board, but they were worried about the parents not running for school board seats.

"Many parents don't know how to go about communicating with the school board," said another Dist. 15 candidate, Warren Franczyk. "It's the job of the board to go to these people," he said, door-to-door if necessary.

High School Dist. 214 and 211 each have two incumbents running for the two available seats. No challengers had signed up to dispute their positions.

JACK MATTHEWS, running for the Dist. 214 school board, said he was troubled by the apparent lack of concern among citizens. Jean Fidler, running for the Dist. 211 board, called for community input.

All three high school candidates who submitted statements or spoke Monday night said one of the biggest problems facing the high schools was in gearing education to fit the needs of the youngsters — those who are going on to college, those heading straight towards work and those with special emotional or physical problems.

Suggestions included expanding to include classes that could lead to college credit and work-study programs in spe-

Gould Center hearing planners' topic

The second phase of the three-phase development of multi-million-dollar Gould Center in Rolling Meadows will be discussed in a public hearing tonight before the city Plan Commission.

The commission is scheduled to hear plans for the construction of a $30 million office-sports complex being built by Gould Inc. on a 39-acre site on Golf Road near the Northwest Tollway.

Construction began last year on the first building phase, a research and development center for Gould, a manufacturer of electronic instruments and systems. The second phase is tentatively planned to include construction of a sports complex, including swimming pool and ice rink, a parking garage and a 10-story office building. The final phase of development will call for construction of four smaller office buildings.

THE GOULD CENTER also will include a 30-foot replica of an original Pablo Picasso work, "The Bather." The company obtained rights to the work in February.

Construction of the statue is expected to begin next month.

Gould officials have said the sports facility will have six handball and squash courts, eight outdoor tennis courts, exercise areas, an ice rink, locker room facilities and an outdoor Olympic-size swimming pool.

The facilities may be available for public use, Gould officials have indicated.

Construction of the entire project is expected to be completed in four to five years.

The project will house the international headquarters of Gould, Inc., a company whose annual sales are about $600 million.

The commission also is scheduled to hear a proposal from Babbitt and Associates to build an office building complex on Golf Road near Algonquin Road.

Kindergarten signups to be held April 9

Spring registration for youngsters starting kindergarten next year will be held at all Palatine-Rolling Meadows Dist. 15 elementary schools April 9.

Registration will be open from 9 to 11 a.m. and 1 to 3 p.m. Detailed information can be obtained from the principal's office in each building.

Only youngsters 5 years of age on or before Dec. 1, 1974, can be registered. Birth certificates may be obtained by contacting the Bureau of Vital Statistics, State House, in the capital city of the state where the child was born.

Free ice skating night Saturday

Residents of the Salt Creek Park District may take part Saturday in a free ice skating night at the Rolling Meadows Sports Complex. The free skating will take place from 8 to 10 p.m. Skates may be rented at the complex.

Children must be accompanied by an adult for the evening. Persons interested in attending should sign up at the district office, 530 S. Williams St., Palatine, or call 259-6890.

Some mortgages here will require flood insurance

The purchase of federally subsidized flood insurance has become a requirement for mortgage loans in some areas of the Northwest suburbs under a federal regulation that went into effect on March 2.

The insurance, available from most local insurance agents, must now be bought by owners of homes that lie in "special flood hazard areas" before those homes can be mortgaged by federally regulated banks and savings and loan associations.

Maps outlining special flood hazard areas, as defined by the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development, have been prepared for Arlington Heights, Des Plaines, Elk Grove Village, Mount Prospect, Palatine, Rolling Meadows and Wheeling.

Maps for Buffalo Grove, Hoffman Estates and Schaumburg are being prepared and should be available by July. In addition, more detailed hydrological studies of the 10 communities are planned to upgrade the current maps.

Hydrological study maps are already completed for Des Plaines and for Palatine.

THE NEW requirement necessitates purchase of the insurance for any new loan or modification of an existing loan on property designated as part of the special flood hazard area on the maps. The requirement for purchase of the insurance applies not only to federally-insured loans, but also to conventional financing according to Paul Downing, a senior vice president and secretary of Uptown Federal Savings and Loan Assn. of Chicago.

Downing explained the new requirement means a financial institution cannot grant a loan unless the insurance is purchased by the homeowner.

Copies of the maps delineating areas of local communities where the mortgage flood insurance requirement is in effect may be seen at local lending institutions or copies can be obtained by contacting State Farm Insurance Co. of Bloomington, Ill.

IN ADDITION to the residents buying the flood insurance because of the new mortgage requirement, an increasing number of Northwest suburbanites are also buying the insurance just for their own protection.

As of December, 1973 a total of 3,500 policies had been sold throughout Illinois, according to Ann Duker of the Illinois Department of Local Governmental Affairs.

Totals as of that date for local communities included 238 policies sold in Arlington Heights, 13 in Buffalo Grove, 58 in Des Plaines, 17 in Elk Grove Village, 14 in Hoffman Estates, 92 in Mount Prospect, 99 in Palatine, 14 in Schaumburg, 13 in Rolling Meadows and 26 in Wheeling.

HOWEVER, the state total for policies sold had risen to 6,800 at the end of March, Mrs. Duker said, indicating that local totals may be higher now.

Mrs. Duker explained that discrepancies in current maps which exclude many flood prone areas from the mortgage requirement will be corrected as more detailed maps are made for each community. The current maps are based on information from the U.S. Soil Conservation Service and on U.S. Geological Survey flood plain maps, she said.

Cost for the flood insurance under the federally subsidized program is a flat annual rate of 25 cents for each $100 of coverage on property damage and 35 cents for each $100 coverage on home contents.

Total cost at maximum coverage would be $122.50.

IN SOME communities, including only the Village of Palatine locally, additional insurance on both the structure of the home and the contents can be purchased. Rates for additional insurance in Palatine are 35 cents per $100 coverage on the structure and 45 cents per $100 coverage on the contents.

Each policy has a $200 deductible clause (or 2 per cent of the amount of loss, whichever is greater) that applies to both building and contents coverage.

Federal flood insurance is also available for multiple-family residential developments, businesses, municipal buildings, churches, hotels and motels.

cific skills needed in the community at the time.

THE TWO MOST commonly reiterated problems voiced by Harper College candidates was the concept of a second campus and the lack of communications with district residents.

Candidate Robert Bromley said that Harper's first campus should be totally complete before plans for a second campus were considered. Donald Payton, another candidate, said that a second campus would involve not only a second facility, but also a second administration, security force and maintenance force.

"It's an extravagance the taxpayers of the district should not have to pay for," he said. He suggested land adjacent to Harper be purchased instead.

THE MOST pressing problem at the campus is communications, according to candidate Judith Troehler. She said that presently the only set of input came from the administration and that board members did not have the time to research many questions thoroughly on their own. More input, she said, would give the board more data on which to make decisions.

"The appalling lack of awareness by many citizens of what the college is doing is at least partly attributable to the college board," said Payton.

"I think the college must relate to the community — relate and be aware of the needs of the people that use it," said another candidate, Ralph Walberg.

Ex-mayor Jenkins compared to 'prostitute'

Jury locked up after 5½ hours in Peskin bribe case

by NANCY COWGER

A federal jury deliberated from 4:30 to 10 p.m. Tuesday without reaching a verdict in the zoning-bribery trial of Atty. Bernard M. Peskin, charged with passing payoffs from a developer to Hoffman Estates officials in 1968. Jurors were sequestered and were to resume deliberations at 9 a.m. today.

Final arguments came earlier Tuesday from U.S. prosecutors and Thomas P. Sullivan, defense attorney.

Sullivan compared former Mayor Roy L. Jenkins, a key government witness who told of taking payoffs from Peskin, to a prostitute in summing up his case to the jury.

"Trying to bribe Jenkins is like trying to rape a prostitute," Sullivan said, reminding jurors that four ex-officials admitted in testimony to taking bribes from other developers before Peskin allegedly channeled payoffs in 1968 from Kaufman and Broad, Inc., in return for favorable zoning.

SULLIVAN ALSO pictured his client as the victim of municipal extortionists, not a willing participant in a bribery scheme, Jenkins and village trustees demanded money, Sullivan said, and Peskin and K&B had to pay or forget building what became the 410-acre Barrington Square complex.

While Sullivan agreed that Peskin probably should have gone to law enforcement agencies when asked for the bribe, he said "that would have killed that zoning in Hoffman Estates."

"Were these men virgins in this area?" Sullivan asked. "Were they amateurs?" Rather, said Sullivan, the village officials were "sophisticated enough" to suggest Peskin deed them a gas station site as part of the bribe through a land trust that would keep their identities secret.

Sullivan characterized current Mayor Virginia Hayter as a "red herring," discounting her testimony that Peskin asked her what it would take for her to drop objections as then school board president to the zoning.

MRS. HAYTER said her standard procedure was to object to developments unless the builders pledged cash donations to the school district. "That's what it would take to make her happy," said Sullivan, noting "this fine upstanding citizen" also said she knew state law prohibits withholding zoning solely to obtain school donations.

Sullivan also maintained that Peskin was simply a conduit through which K & B passed zoning payoff money to the former village officials. With this theory, said Sullivan, Peskin did not evade taxes as charged in the 14-count indictment against him but overpaid them instead.

Prosecutors Anton Valukas and Tyrone Fahner, both assistant U.S. attorneys, told the jury members to rely on their common sense, arguing the defense had merely tried "to confuse the jury's mind."

"There is no doubt that Jenkins and Peskin were both playing both ends against the middle," said Fahner.

Jenkins took a double share of the $35,000 payoff without telling other village officials and Peskin still was asking for bribes to pass to Jenkins two years after he had told Jenkins the bribe faucet was turned off, said Fahner.

FAHNER CALLED Jenkins a "bad man," but said the prosecution didn't pick its witnesses — Peskin did. And Fahner argued Peskin is too powerful to be an extortion victim. Pointing to the prominent character witnesses Peskin called in his defense, including congressmen, state officials and a newspaper columnist, Fahner asked if "a man like this, a man with friends like these, gets extorted from?"

Valukas noted that Peskin "had $103,000 riding on getting this zoning through," $53,000 in a finder's fee from Rossmore Corp., from which K & B bought the land, and $50,000 in fees from K & B for obtaining the zoning.

"What Peskin was looking for wasn't a fair hearing. What Peskin was looking for was a guarantee within a time frame," Valukas said.

Valukas urged the jurors to think about their own income tax, saying Peskin "phonied-up" his tax returns by shifting the income to persons in lower tax brackets who then paid the ultimate cost of bribes and corruption.

Valukas also referred to Mayor Hayter, noting Peskin told her "it's going to go through" after she refused to "be made happy." Describing Peskin's words as the "purest of arrogance" Valukas said, "Mrs. Hayter and the others were up there arguing in good faith because they didn't know it was a rigged game."

U.S. Dist. Court Judge Frank J. McGarr is presiding over Peskin's trial on an Oct. 26 indictment charging him with bribery, tax evasion and conspiracy. Six former village officials also named in the indictment pleaded guilty and were sentenced to prison.

Hillcrest Towers topout expected later this month

Topping out of the first of four 12-story buildings in Hillcrest Towers is expected this month, according to Joseph Julian, Schaumburg building commissioner.

Construction on the high-rise complex, at Roselle and Hillcrest roads, was voluntarily halted by Amcon Construction Corp. Aug. 1 when cracks were discovered in the lower level of the first building.

At that time Amcon contracted an independent study by Rath, Rath and Johnson, a Hinsdale consulting firm, to discover why cracks occurred and recommend a solution to problems so that building could resume.

THE PROJECT does not involve the use of structural steel and outside walls are being filled with concrete and have steel reinforcing rods, Julian said.

Problems were observed when the building reached seven stories and Julian said the village refused to permit the project to continue until "all corrective measures were completed."

"Sonic testing was used as a means of verifying that blocks were properly filled with cement," Julian said. He explained that the engineering investigation pinpointed a number of blocks that had not been filled. "This required pouring liquid concrete into all crevices," he added.

"Apparently, the problem resulted from a mason contractor who didn't do the work as it should have been done in the first place," Julian commented.

HE SAID THE VILLAGE permitted construction to resume in late January adding that "the project is being carefully supervised by both the consultants and the village."

Construction, Julian said, has moved along well on the exterior although nothing has been done to the interior of the building yet.

He said "the building is definitely not sinking into the ground."

Hoffman Estates turns down five-year lease with parks

Chino decision termed 'disappointing'

Hoffman Estates Park District officials expressed disappointment Tuesday at a village board decision turning down a five-year lease with the park district for Chino Park.

"I'm disappointed about the whole thing," Park Comr. Shirley Gibbons said. "We're very capable of taking care of what we have. It is just unfortunate that the parks are in the way they are."

Park Board Pres. Fred Weaver said although the park district has no plans to pursue the issue of jurisdiction over the park at Evanston Street and Illinois Boulevard, "It will be a source of discussion for years to come as long as the village owns it."

Comr. Thomas Barber said, "I don't understand it. Fred (Weaver) and I have been working for a considerable length of time on Chino Park. There seems to be more to it than just on the surface."

THE VILLAGE board several weeks ago denied a park district bid for ownership of the park because it was the only open village property south of Higgins Road and liquor could not be served at the traditional Fourth of July celebration if the park district owned it.

"I don't accept that kind of rationale," Barber said. "I don't see why they sit down for that length of time to do something for the community and end up doing nothing for the community."

The village board turned down the lease proposal Monday night but did appropriate $3,200 for general renovation of ballfields at Chino Park. Some officials view the action as questionable because of a state law requiring a municipality to hold a voter referendum before money can be spent on recreation or field maintenance.

However, trustee Diane Jensen said she received information from a home-rule seminar that home-rule municipalities such as Hoffman Estates may pass an ordinance exempting the village from the recreation statute. Village Atty. Edward Hofert was directed to examine if home-rule powers would apply in this case.

AT THE VILLAGE board meeting the Hoffman Estates Boys' Club asked once again for a lease on the village property, and club officials criticized the park district for the poor conditions of present athletic fields in the area. Several groups have asked for Chino Park during the village's six years of indecision about what to do with the site.

Many persons from various athletic organizations attended the board meeting. Members of the Hoffman Estates Athletic Assn. and the Hoffman Estates Community Baseball Assn. backed the park district in its effort to lease the fields.

However, after the decision, officials of the three organizations banded together and announced they would make about $3,000 worth of improvements at Chino Park.

TONY STOMPANATO, one of the directors of the Boys' Club board, said the three organizations will work together because the officials wanted to have Chino Park in good condition so area youngsters will not be short-changed.

"Were (Boys' Club) satisfied (with the decision). Our main interest was that the park district not get the park," Stompanato said, noting that the park district has had problems with maintaining fields.

Stompanato said there were rocks, stones, low and bare spots that marred the fields. He added that each organization could have 20 men each at the site working almost immediately. Renovation of the park could be done before the baseball season starts May 1, Stompanato noted.

Representatives from each of the three athletic organizations will meet with the village board's building and grounds committee in the near future to organize improvements at the park.

HILLCREST TOWERS first high-rise building may reach a full 12 stories this month. The Amcon Construction Corp. project was voluntarily halted by the builder in August when foundation cracks occurred.

Some mortgages here will require flood insurance

The purchase of federally subsidized flood insurance has become a requirement for mortgage loans in some areas of the Northwest suburbs under a federal regulation that went into effect on March 2.

The insurance, available from most local insurance agents, must now be bought by owners of homes that lie in "special flood hazard areas" before those homes can be mortgaged by federally regulated banks and savings and loan associations.

Maps outlining special flood hazard areas, as defined by the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development, have been prepared for Arlington Heights, Des Plaines, Elk Grove Village, Mount Prospect, Palatine, Rolling Meadows and Wheeling.

Maps for Buffalo Grove, Hoffman Estates and Schaumburg are being prepared and should be available by July.

In addition, more detailed hydrological studies of the 10 communities are planned to upgrade the current maps.

Hydrological study maps are already completed for Des Plaines and for Palatine.

THE NEW requirement necessitates purchase of the insurance for any new loan or modification of an existing loan on property designated as part of the special flood hazard area on the maps.

The requirement for purchase of the insurance applies not only to federally-insured loans, but also to conventional financing according to Paul Downing, a senior vice president and secretary of Uptown Federal Savings and Loan Assn. of Chicago.

Downing explained the new requirement means a financial institution cannot grant a loan unless the insurance is purchased by the homeowner.

Copies of the maps delineating areas of local communities where the mortgage flood insurance requirement is in effect may be seen at local lending institutions or copies can be obtained by contacting State Farm Insurance Co. of Bloomington, Ill.

IN ADDITION to the residents buying the flood insurance because of the new mortgage requirement, an increasing number of Northwest suburbanites are also buying the insurance just for their own protection.

As of December, 1973 a total of 3,500 policies had been sold throughout Illinois, according to Ann Duker of the Illinois Department of Local Governmental Affairs.

Totals as of that date for local communities included 238 policies sold in Arlington Heights, 13 in Buffalo Grove, 53 in Des Plaines, 17 in Elk Grove Village, 14 in Hoffman Estates, 92 in Mount Prospect, 99 in Palatine, 14 in Schaumburg, 13 in Rolling Meadows and 26 in Wheeling.

HOWEVER, the state total for policies sold had risen to 6,800 at the end of March, Mrs. Duker said, indicating that local totals may be higher now.

Mrs. Duker explained that discrepancies in current maps which exclude many flood prone areas from the mortgage requirement will be corrected as more detailed maps are made for each community. The current maps are based on information from the U.S. Soil Conservation Service and on U.S. Geological Survey flood plain maps, she said.

Cost for the flood insurance under the federally subsidized program is a flat annual rate of 25 cents for each $100 of coverage on property damage and 35 cents for each $100 coverage on home contents.

Total cost at maximum coverage would be $122.50.

IN SOME communities, including only the Village of Palatine locally, additional insurance on both the structure of the home and the contents can be purchased. Rates for additional insurance in Palatine are 35 cents per $100 coverage on the structure and 45 cents per $100 coverage on the contents.

Each policy has a $200 deductible clause (or 2 per cent of the amount of loss, whichever is greater) that applies to both building and contents coverage.

Federal flood insurance is also available for multiple-family residential developments, businesses, municipal buildings, churches, hotels and motels.

Manuel Rodriguez's forte: Tae Kwon Do

Conant sophomore teaches self-defense

by KATHERINE BOYCE

Ayee!

In one motion Manuel Rodriguez whirls around, kicks above the head of his opponent and with one quick slice of his outstretched hand he hurls him to the mat.

Rodriguez, a sophomore at Conant High School, is teaching an art of self-defense called Tae Kwon Do, a combination of karate and judo, to fellow students. They meet in the gymnasium three days a week after school.

The 15 students in the group, which includes three girls, practice side by side with the wrestling, track, volleyball and badminton teams. Rodriguez, who studied Tae Kwon Do for nearly three years in New York, says it is just as safe as any of the other sports and the students probably benefit more from it.

"It's no more dangerous than wrestling," says Rodriguez. "You learn control. You learn when to strike hard and when to strike soft," he says.

ABOUT 10 per cent of the blows struck in Tae Kwon Do are with the feet and 10 per cent are with the hands, says Rodriguez. In actual fighting the blow is struck with the ball of the foot, says Rodriguez, but when it is done as a sport it is struck with the top of the foot and is nothing more than a slap.

The students practice Tae Kwon Do only as a sport. Nevertheless, they must have their parents' signature on a permission slip to join the group. The students hope to get their group recognized by the board of education as an official school club which would qualify them for insurance through the school, says Rodriguez. Their sponsors, teachers Josephine Riccardi and Bill William Myers, are backing them up, he says.

The group is open to all students who are interested in learning this art of self-defense, says Rodriguez. The lessons are free. Rodriguez says he decided to teach Tae Kwon Do to other students when he moved here last summer because he had learned so much from it himself. "I'd like to give them the same chance I had," he says.

Rodriguez thinks of Tae Kwon Do as an art, not just a sport. The movements are smooth, almost graceful. "The beauty of it is almost like a ballet," he says. "Everything you do you picture in your head a split second before you do it."

BUT THE PHILOSOPHY of Tae Kwon Do is even more important to Rodriguez and his students than the physical movements. It teaches self-discipline, says Rodriguez and is almost like a religion. "By teaching it the right way you can teach people to respect each other," he

Mike Gale, member of the group, agrees. "The more you learn it the more you learn respect for other people."

"You don't practice Tae Kwon Do to fight but to improve your way of thinking, to give yourself a discipline," says Rodriguez. It helps develop an "inner strength," he says. "It's mind over matter."

Some students who can't get into other sports, get interested in Tae Kwon Do, says Mike. All it takes is "knowledge and patience," he says. "You don't have to be physically strong."

"It gives a person a feeling of accomplishment," says Mike. "Anybody can do it if they put their mind to it. It doesn't take a superman."

All students are welcome

The Schaumburg Park District youth program which operates on Friday nights is open to all junior high school students living in the park district.

A majority of the program's participants are from Frost and Addams junior high schools. A story in the Herald last week inadvertently failed to report that Schaumburg Park District residents attending Eisenhower and Keller junior high schools and area private schools are eligible to attend the program.

Customer hits salesman on head with phone

William R. Born, 42, of 1306 S. Highland, Arlington Heights, will appear May 5 in Schaumburg branch of Cook County Circuit Court to answer battery charges.

Born allegedly struck Leon Molway, a salesman at J. C. Penney Auto Center, Woodfield Shopping Center, with a telephone late Monday.

Police said in altercation occurred when Born asked Molway to wait on him and was told to wait until the salesman finished with another customer.

According to testimony from Molway, Born then requested a counter telephone to call the store manager. Police said Born grabbed the telephone from Molway and struck him on the head with the instrument.

Molway was treated for head cuts at Northwest Community Hospital and later released. Born was detained by Schaumburg police but was freed on $1,000 bond early yesterday, police said.

'Hundreds' of village signs illegal, building chief says

by MARCIA KRAMER

Signs — hundreds of them, of virtually all shapes and sizes — are displayed in Mount Prospect, and a good many of them are illegal, says the village building director.

The village sign ordinance has been flaunted to the extent that building director Buell Dutton remarked: "I could take you out and show you hundreds of illegal signs."

Dutton is launching a campaign to shore up the village sign ordinance to make it tougher for merchants to display particularly large or gaudy signs. And, in a related move, he's hoping to hire an inspector to make sure the ordinance is obeyed.

Dutton acknowledges that the present ordinance regulating the size and type of permissible signs has been virtually disregarded by both the village and by local merchants anxious to attract the attention of passing motorists. "I frankly believe the sign people are well aware we've lost control of signs," he said. "As far as I can tell, the ordinance has never been strongly enforced."

DUTTON INDICATED that even with a redrafting of the ordinance and the hiring ing of an inspector to enforce it, "it will be one good solid year before we get this sign mess straightened out."

What's wrong with most of the illegal signs in Mount Prospect, says Dutton, is their size and location. Merchants often don't bother obtaining a permit to erect a sign, he said, and as a result, put up signs that are, for example, too large, too close to the roadway or not properly affixed.

What does all this mean to the public? Two things, said Dutton. First, the domino theory of each merchant erecting a bigger and more noticeable sign than his neighbor is unattractive aesthetically and can be distracting to drivers. And, said Dutton, improperly installed signs can create a hazard to pedestrians.

"Many of these signs are dangerous. They're not secure and could blow down or fall down and kill somebody. One woman was recently injured when a small sign illegally kept in the driveway of a gas station blew over and struck her in the leg. Ground signs often wind up in the street after storms."

"ENVIRONMENTAL POLLUTION," Dutton said, is becoming more and more a factor in the sign business. "If you have a hodge-podge mess of something, it can depreciate the property value just by what it looks like. Communities are beginning to recognize this."

In overhauling the sign ordinance, Dutton hopes to eliminate inconsistencies in the present ordinance and to eventually get rid of the many rotating, fluttering, and flashing signs that may bring in business but at the same time create "environmental pollution."

The added expense of annual sign inspections — a first in Mount Prospect — will be paid by local merchants, Dutton said. "They may have a fit, I don't know. I would think the legitimate and honest merchants would want a program that can be to their benefit. If everyone's treated alike, nobody can get hurt."

10 police chief applicants already

Ten persons already have applied to become Mount Prospect Police Chief, after Chief Bert Giddens resigns May 17.

Village Mgr. Robert J. Eppley said he has received eight applications from persons outside the police department and two from within. There has been no advertising for the position.

Whether Eppley will choose Giddens' successor from inside the department or not could hinge on what salary is approved for the chief's position by the village board. "The salary will determine a lot," Eppley said Tuesday. He added he is asking for a chief's salary in excess of $21,000. Giddens is receiving $19,245.

Eppley also said he may not appoint an acting chief from within the department as he originally planned.

MORE THAN 150 parents, teachers and principals attended the Dist. 59 board meeting to voice their concern over a current conflict between the superintendent and district principals. Gloria Casper spoke up.

Village eyes compromise to allow condo project

A proposed compromise that would allow construction of 80 condominium units at the northwest corner of River and Camp McDonald roads in Mount Prospect was disclosed Tuesday night, much to the displeasure of area residents and three village trustees.

About 30 residents of the northeast section of the village near the 3.3-acre site were present, and made clear their opposition to changing the zoning of the property from single-family to multi-family use.

Under the proposed consent decree, the developer, J. M. Brickman Mid-West Corp., Mount Prospect, would be permitted to build a 3-story condominium building containing 80 units, and in return would agree to withdraw his lawsuit against the village in which he is seeking rezoning to permit 113 units plus one floor of commercial offices.

Brickman earlier had twice asked the village to rezone the property for 85 (later reduced to 80) condominium units. The village board in both cases voted to approve the request, by a 4-3 margin, but the request was rejected because a written objection filed by adjoining property owners required approval by a two-thirds majority, or five, yes votes.

BRICKMAN SUBSEQUENTLY sued the village for rezoning, and the village's apparent fear that it would lose the case prompted negotiations for a compromise settlement.

However, three trustees, led by Patrick J. Link voiced objections to the compromise drafted by Village Atty. John J. Zimmermann.

Link said board approval of the project "would really be a travesty." He said Brickman has presented "not one scintilla of evidence" to justify the rezoning request. He also cited lack of a buffer zone and adequate flood control measures in opposing the development.

Link was joined by trustees O. T. Gustas, who said bluntly, "It stinks," and by Richard N. Hendricks, who referred to the project as "spot zoning." The property is surrounded by single-family homes and the Cook County Forest Preserve District.

Meanwhile, trustees Kenneth V. Scholten, E. F. Richardson and George B. Anderson supported the compromise. Scholten cited the cost of continuing the legal fight, and Anderson, an engineer, praised various utility arrangements. Richardson remarked that while he sympathized with the property owners, "I feel we are fighting a losing battle. I am convinced of it."

MAYOR Robert D. Teichert did not take a stand, but in a controversial ruling that could affect the outcome, stated that only a simple majority, rather than two-thirds, would be needed to approve the decree paving the way for the project.

At press time, residents were expressing their opposition to the plans, saying in general it would decrease property values and worsen flooding problems.

River Trails teachers get 8% pay hike

The Dist. 26 school board and the River Trails Education Assn. have approved a 1974-75 contract which provides teachers an 8.6 per cent salary increase.

The contract, which was negotiated after two bargaining sessions, was approved overwhelmingly by teachers Tuesday. The board gave its unanimous approval to the contract package Tuesday night.

In addition to the salary hike, teachers will also receive salary increments averaging 3.4 per cent.

As a result of the package, the starting salary for a teacher with a bachelor's degree and no experience will jump from $8,325 this year to $9,040 next year. A teacher with a bachelor's degree and 10 years experience will receive $12,615 next year compared to $11,800 this year.

THE SALARY hike, which amounts to a 12 per cent increase when increments are included, will cost the district an additional $210,000 next year. The board will spend approximately $2 million this year for teacher salaries.

Other items in the 1974-75 contract include updating educational increments twice a year; establishment of a sick leave bank to be administered by the RTEA; a 10 per cent increase in extra duty pay; and additional compensation for summer curriculum work.

The negotiators also agreed to form a task force under the auspices of the RTEA to study development of a merit pay system to reward teachers. The group will also study expanded insurance coverage and other fringe benefits as part of future contract considerations.

The task force will include teachers, board members and members of the administration.

"We believe these negotiations were conducted effectively because of the atmosphere of mutual trust and honesty fostered by the actions of both sides," board member William Haase said. "We believe galesmanship, stalling tactics, and proposing totally unreasonable contract terms need not be part of the negotiating process."

"I hope this relatively rapid settlement demonstrates again to our teachers that this board is concerned primarily with quality education," Haase added. "I also hope it sets an example to others that the primary business of a school district is to educate children and not to bicker over trivia."

GARY RATHGEBER, RTEA president, said the teachers were very pleased with terms of the agreement. Although the exact vote of the RTEA membership was not available, Rathgeber said the package was approved overwhelmingly. The RTEA represents about 130 teachers in the district.

Haase, chairman of the board's negotiating committee, said the 8.6 per cent salary increase was the board's first offer. Rathgeber did not say what type of pay boost the teachers were seeking. The board's figure, however, was apparently close to RTEA expectations because settlement of the issue came after only two bargaining sessions.

Terms of the package, which was settled March 13, were made public for the first time Tuesday night.

Pay increase for Erviti

In compromise schools give superintendent 5% more despite calls for his dismissal from angry crowd

by BOB GALLAS

The Dist. 59 Board of Education, in what is believed to be a compromise gesture, has given all administrators a 5 per cent raise effective July 1. The raise was approved despite a call from parents and present and future board members to table any action on Supt. James Erviti's contract until a controversy between Erviti and district principals is worked out.

The announcement of the pay hike followed a three-hour executive session of the board during which Erviti's contract was apparently discussed.

The superintendent receives a yearly contract review by the board. According to sources some board members were pushing this year to extend Erviti's contract one year and give him an 8 per cent pay raise. Apparently pressure from other board members, who wanted to freeze all administrative salaries until the principals-Erviti conflict is worked out, made the compromise necessary.

Prior to their lengthy closed-door session, which went past 3 a.m. yesterday, board members heard sharp criticism of Erviti from some of the 150 parents, teachers and principals who attended the session. Criticism was also leveled at the board, which many felt should get involved in settling the dispute immediately.

THE BOARD has officially maintained its policy is to stay informed, but not involved, until members are sure the problem cannot be worked out by Erviti and his principals.

In a letter to Erviti more than a month ago, the principals listed the concerns which included the superintendent's "demeaning" treatment of principals, the district's budget development practice and the "single-text approach" principals said seems to be the direction of the district.

The principals asked that a series of meetings be held to work out the differences.

The principals, many of whom indicated that the meetings were producing "little success," called for a renewed effort in working out the problems in a statement issued at Monday night's board meeting.

Since the principals' conflict with the administration was revealed by The Herald last week, support for them has come in from all directions including the Dist. 59 Teachers' Council, numerous parent groups and individuals.

Board members Judy Zanca and outgoing member Irwin Poklaski, called for the raises to be tabled but they were voted down, 5 to 2.

THE 5 PER CENT raise applies to principals, assistant principals, the director of pupil personnel, assistant superintendents, and Erviti. The motion for the raises also included a provision which called for all salaries to be reviewed again Sept. 15, at which time additional raises might be given retroactive to July 1.

Erviti presently receives $34,182 plus a host of fringe benefits. His increase will bring him up to $35,891. Last year the board voted him an 8 per cent pay raise in the midst of another controversy and rumored attempts by some on the board to dump him. His contract runs through July, 1976.

THE MEETING was the last for two board members, President Allen Sparks and Poklaski. Two new board members, Paul Kucharski and Avis Wold, are running for the board unopposed and will presumably take office at the next board meeting.

The majority of those at the meeting asked that the board intervene for a quick resolution of the problem between principals and Erviti. Some either in person or through letters read at the meeting, demanded Erviti's immediate dismissal.

A parent's charge that Erviti "has not been sensitive to our desires as taxpayers," brought a round of applause from the obviously partisan audience.

Another woman stood to add that "most of us are here because we've been run roughshod over by Dr. Erviti."

THROUGHOUT THE attacks Erviti sat silent, appeared unaffected, and did not comment on anything that was said. Erviti returned from a one-week vacation Monday and, at that time, told The Herald he would not comment on the conflict as he considered it an "administrative matter."

The parents' comments fairly well summed up the overall comments of those who spoke out at the meeting. Their concern wasn't with the budget development practice in the district or the "single text approach" — but dealt solely with Erviti.

It's possible the feeling of the board in the dispute might change noticeably at its next meeting, April 15, when both new board members take office. Both have called for board involvement to settle the matter quickly.

Village budget on board agenda

Mount Prospect village trustees will huddle over the village's proposed 1974-75 budget tonight in the second session devoted to the document.

The proposed $7,979,615 budget drew complaints from some trustees last week when it was learned $110,000 the trustees wanted set aside for land acquisition had been omitted.

Tonight's session, open to the public, will begin at 7:30 in the village hall, 112 E. Northwest Hwy.

Some mortgages here will require flood insurance

The purchase of federally subsidized flood insurance has become a requirement for mortgage loans in some areas of the Northwest suburbs under a federal regulation that went into effect on March 2.

The insurance, available from most local insurance agents, must now be bought by owners of homes that lie in "special flood hazard areas" before those homes can be mortgaged by federally regulated banks and savings and loan associations.

Maps outlining special flood hazard areas, as defined by the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development, have been prepared for Arlington Heights, Des Plaines, Elk Grove Village, Mount Prospect, Palatine, Rolling Meadows and Wheeling.

Maps for Buffalo Grove, Hoffman Estates and Schaumburg are being prepared and should be available by July.

In addition, more detailed hydrological studies of the 10 communities are planned to upgrade the current maps.

Hydrological study maps are already completed for Des Plaines and Palatine.

THE NEW requirement necessitates purchase of the insurance for any new loan or modification of an existing loan on property designated as part of the special flood hazard area on the maps.

The requirement for purchase of the insurance applies not only to federally-insured loans, but also to conventional financing according to Paul Downing, a senior vice president and secretary of Uptown Federal Savings and Loan Assn. of Chicago.

Downing explained the new requirement means a financial institution cannot grant a loan unless the insurance is purchased by the homeowner.

Copies of the maps delineating areas of local communities where the mortgage flood insurance requirement is in effect may be seen at local lending institutions or copies can be obtained by contacting State Farm Insurance Co. of Bloomington, Ill.

IN ADDITION to the residents buying the flood insurance because of the new mortgage requirement, an increasing number of Northwest suburbanites are also buying the insurance just for their own protection.

As of December, 1973 a total of 3,500 policies had been sold throughout Illinois, according to Ann Duker of the Illinois Department of Local Governmental Affairs.

Totals as of that date for local communities included 238 policies sold in Arlington Heights, 13 in Buffalo Grove, 58 in Des Plaines, 17 in Elk Grove Village, 14 in Hoffman Estates, 92 in Mount Prospect, 99 in Palatine, 14 in Schaumburg, 13 in Rolling Meadows and 26 in Wheeling.

HOWEVER, THE state total for policies sold had risen to 6,800 at the end of March, Mrs. Duker said, indicating that local totals may be higher now.

Mrs. Duker explained that discrepancies in current maps which exclude many flood prone areas from the mortgage requirement will be corrected as more detailed maps are made for each community. The current maps are based on information from the U.S. Soil Conservation Service and on U.S. Geological Survey flood plain maps, she said.

Cost for the flood insurance under the federally subsidized program is a flat annuual rate of 25 cents for each $100 of coverage on property damage and 35 cents for each $100 coverage on home contents.

Total cost at maximum coverage would be $122.50.

IN SOME communities, including only the Village of Palatine locally, additional insurance on both the structure of the home and the contents can be purchased. Rates for additional insurance in Palatine are 35 cents per $100 coverage on the structure and 45 cents per $100 coverage on the contents.

Each policy has a $200 deductible clause (or 2 per cent of the amount of loss, whichever is greater) that applies to both building and contents coverage.

Federal flood insurance is also available for multiple-family residential developments, businesses, municipal buildings, churches, hotels and motels.

Flood insurance required

Woodview faces home-selling woes

by MARCIA KRAMER

Residents of the Woodview subdivision in Mount Prospect may encounter difficulty selling their homes because of a new federal requirement that flood insurance be obtained before a home mortgage will be issued.

The subdivision, at the northeast edge of the village, has been designated a "special flood hazard area" by the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development. Woodview lies just west of the Des Plaines River, and has been subjected to flooding on occasion when the river has overflowed its banks.

The new federal requirement that flood insurance be purchased before a mortgage can be issued also applies to present homeowners seeking a change in their mortgage. In addition, present homeowners who apply for a federal or federally-related loan to repair damage due to flooding must obtain flood insurance.

Cost of the insurance, under the federally-subsidized program, is 25 cents per $100 coverage on property damage and 35 cents per $100 coverage on home content annually. Total cost at maximum coverage is $122.50.

THE NEW requirement, which went into effect March 2, is expected to have a detrimental effect on property value in the Woodview subdivision and on the ability of homeowners to sell their houses.

Dick Geist, a salesperson for Homefinders Realty in Mount Prospect, said prospective homeowners would probably balk at buying a house in a designated flood hazard area. "It would tend to scare people away," he said. "Everyone's afraid of flooding."

He also noted that some prospective buyers may be hesitant about the cost of flood insurance. "People are taxed up to their ears right now," he said.

The area cited by HUD as a "special flood hazard area" is bounded by Willow Road-Seminole Lane on the north, Des Plaines River Road on the east (both are the village limits), Camp McDonald Road on the south, and a jagged line extending as far as Beech Road on the west.

The 250 homes in the Woodview subdivision are valued at $45,000 to $80,000, according to Geist, who has been in the real estate field since 1960.

VILLAGE ENGINEER Bernard H. R. Hemminger agreed with HUD's singling out the Woodview area as a flood hazard. He acknowledged that other parts of town have also experienced flooding, but said: "There's more potential damage up here because we're talking about a larger stream. You're talking about a river — the Des Plaines River — where Weller Creek is just a small stream."

In the Mount Prospect flood survey last year, the Woodview subdivision ranked third of 44 areas in frequency of flooding since 1960. Of 370 respondents, 30.3 per cent reported their houses have experienced some flooding since 1960 (ranking 36th), at an average of 5.23 times (ranking 3rd).

The neighborhood ranked 32nd in the depth of basement flooding during heavy storms in August and September of 1972, and 26th in lawn flooding. In the duration of the flooding, however, the subdivision was ranked fifth — an average of 17 hours.

The Woodview area was not included in sewer improvements as part of the village's $2 million flood control program, but Hemminger said it is because sewer service in the subdivision is provided by Citizens Utilities Co., not by the village.

He said one possible solution to the flooding problem in the Woodview subdivision would be to build dikes on both sides of the Des Plaines River to contain overflow water.

Neubaums return—again

Herb and Ginny Neubaum, 108 S. Hill, just returned from another of their many trips. This time it was a Caribbean Cruise leaving from San Juan, Puerto Rico. Their ship sailed at night and their group toured five vacation spots during the daytime — Barbados, Antigua, St. Martin, Martinique and St. Thomas.

"Each island was different," said Ginny, "and we enjoyed them all."

Following the cruise, the Neubaums met friends at Indian Rocks Beach, Florida, on the Gulf, and then drove 500 miles around Florida seeing such things as Disneyworld and Tarpon Springs.

BEST WISHES go to Bob and Ginny Kreuger, 501 E. Council Tr., who moved this week to Cedarburg, Wis., just outside Milwaukee. Also, to Pat and Claude Nave as they move from 2005 Scott Terrace to Portland, Ore.

GREG WASHWELL, 104 S. Edward, a freshman at Southern Illinois University, made the dean's list.

TERRI BOXLEITNER, 212 N. Dale, seems to be following in her brother Bruce's showbusiness footsteps.

Terri, at the University of Wisconsin-Milwaukee, recently performed in the school's "Dances for Kohoutek," which were more visible than the hard-to-find comet to which the dances were dedicated. Terri appeared in a number called "Innocence of Time," which she and a young man student choreographed and danced together.

Terri's brother, Bruce, who gained local fame for his appearance in Status Quo Vadis at the Ivanhoe Theatre in Chicago, is now in California. He's working on a movie for TV, "The Chadwicks," which also includes Fred MacMurray.

Arlington Manor flood funds OK'd

by JERRY THOMAS

Half the cost of an estimated $180,000 storm sewer project that will alleviate flooding in the Arlington Manor Subdivision in unincorporated Elk Grove Township, will be paid by township federal revenue-sharing money.

The rest of the funds must come from Manor residents' pockets or other agencies. Their share of the cost could be about $400 a lot.

The auditors Monday decided to use federal money to help solve the areas flooding problems.

Supervisor Richard Hall received the board of auditors' approval to earmark $90,000 for the sewer work and offer to share the cost with owners of the 224 lots in the subdivision.

THE SUBDIVISION a semi-developed area bounded by Arlington Heights Road on the west, Magnolia on the south, Douglas on the east and Cypress on the north, lies in a flood plain.

Its first residents did not suffer flooding until the area was built up and storm water courses were altered.

A soft-spoken housewife, Mrs. Bernard Sandner, represents a group of residents in the subdivision whose homes suffer the worst flooding. She said she has made repeated visits to the board of auditors and has contacted every agency imaginable for help.

The auditors' informal vote to offer financial help to Manor subdivision came after she had left the meeting Monday and she was unavailable for comment yesterday.

MRS. SANDNER appeared before the auditors Monday to ask the boards help to act as watchdogs of further development in the area. She told the board a small shopping center was being considered for Arlington Heights Road bordering the Manor subdivision and she was worried it might contribute to flooding.

Residents of the area also maintain a Arlington Heights storm water outlet at the subdivision's border sends floods of storm water in the subdivision during rain.

Mrs. Sandner said the township is the only agency that has listened to the areas complaint of flooding and then taken action.

School calendar to be changed

The Dist. 23 School Board is expected to approve several changes in the 1973-74 calendar at its meeting tonight. The board will convene at 7:30 p.m. at the administration building, 700 N. Schoenbeck Rd., Prospect Heights.

Among items to be changed in the calendar are the Memorial Day holiday from May 27 to May 30 and a change in the day for graduation ceremonies from June 11 to June 12.

The board also will consider a request from the Northwest Educational Cooperative for $702 in forward funding to develop Sunrise Lake Camp. The money will count toward the cost of sending district children to the camp this summer.

Last year the township authorized an engineering study that recommended solutions to the flooding. The engineers recommended installing a storm sewer system that would take water from the Arlington Heights outfall and the area streets to a nearby Mount Prospect storm water line.

THE SOLUTION sounds simple, but carried an $180,000 price tag.

When Hall received the OK Monday to offer financial help to the Manor residents, several members of the board worried about how the other half of the costs would be paid.

Auditors Walter Bartley and Larry Hintz said since the township has no power to impose assessments for such work, the residents must make voluntary payment.

"Although there are 224 lots in that area, not all of them are affected by flooding and some residents probably will refuse to pay the estimated $400 a lot share of costs," said Hintz.

Auditor Wayne Hult cautioned the board against taking hasty action. "We should weigh the issue. Is it right to spend so much and benefit only about 20 homes?" he asked.

Hall said the whole area, not just those homes that flood extensively, suffers when flood water covers the subdivision.

"SEPTIC FIELDS can contaminate wells in the area and make the problem a severe one for all the residents," Hall said.

The auditors set an April 23, 8 p.m. meeting between residents of Arlington Manor and the township in the township building at 2400 S. Arlington Heights Rd., Arlington Heights.

Hall said the township cannot impose a tax on Manor residents for the storm sewer work. "We paid for the engineering study and have a solution to the flooding and are willing to hear part of the cost. The rest is up to the residents," Hall said.

Village selects second site for senior low-rent housing

A ONE-ACRE site between Miner and Wing streets has been selected as the possible future location for 119 units of low-rent elderly housing.

by KURT BAER

Arlington Heights officials have selected a second site where they hope to develop 119 units of low-rent housing for senior citizens.

A one-acre site, between Miner and Wing streets, west of Highland Avenue, has been tentatively approved by the Arlington Heights Village Board, the Cook County Housing Authority and the U.S. Dept. of Housing and Urban Development.

Six lots, immediately west of the Jewel Food Store, 112 N. Vail Ave., would have to be assembled to make up the site. All but one of the property owners reportedly are ready to sell.

The land under consideration is eligible for multi-family development up to six stories in height, which means the 119-unit senior citizens project probably could be built without any zoning variation.

THE FIRST SITE designated for the project, the 400 block of North Dunton Avenue, was dropped in January because of opposition from affected property owners.

However both Arlington Heights Village Pres. Jack Walsh and Village Mgr. L. A. Hanson said yesterday that they do not anticipate the same controversy over the second location.

"I've scoured the town and if anyone can come up with another site that is available, meets the requirements and displaces fewer people, I'm ready to listen," Hanson said.

One of the six lots needed for the site is vacant. Three others have houses which are being rented, but whose owners reportedly have agreed to sell.

However one property owner, Leo M. Schwarz, 304 W. Wing St., reportedly has not decided to sell his house, or the vacant lot directly behind it. Both lots are needed to square off the L-shaped acre site.

WALSH SAID he hoped sale of the remaining parcel could be worked out. If not, he said, it would be possible to acquire the land through condemnation.

Purchase of the property is negotiated by the CCHA using HUD money.

Hanson declined to speculate on the sale price of the combined properties. But the land's eligibility for high density multifamily housing is certain to boost the market price above the value of the homes alone.

"I'm sure the price offered will be consistent with the value of the property. This is no bargain basement price arrangement," Walsh said.

Although each owner has been contacted individually, a joint meeting will be set up to discuss details of the land sale, Walsh said.

HANSON SAID he would meet again with CCHA Director Victor Walchirk to secure final approval of the proposed site. Walchirk has already indicated the location's general suitability, he said.

HUD requires that the senior citizens housing be located close to shopping, transportation, medical offices and other factors important in the day-to-day life of the elderly.

The village board, meeting in executive session Monday night, accepted the Miner Street site and authorized continued negotiation with the property owners, Walsh said.

Another site mentioned as a possible spot for the senior citizens housing, on south Dunton Avenue, just north of South Street, is not suitable because a height variation would be required to build the 119 units, Hanson said.

A PRIVATE real estate broker, acting as an agent for the Dell building corporation in Northbrook, had inquired about the Dunton Avenue site, The Herald learned last week.

Walsh said he hoped negotiations for the Miner Street site can be concluded with the several property owners. "It shouldn't be controversial," he said.

Arlington Heights was approved for 119 units of federally subsidized housing for senior citizens early last year. The housing will be available to persons 62 years of age or older, with incomes not exceeding $4,900, and to couples with a combined income of not more than $5,600, according to HUD guidelines.

A one-bedroom apartment is expected to rent for about $50 a month.

DEBBIE VINIKOUR and Dave Gordon will appear this weekend in the Forest View High School production of "Plaza Suite," a comedy by Neil Simon. The play will be performed Thursday at 7:30 p.m. and Friday and Saturday at 8 p.m. at the school. Tickets are $1.50 for adults and $1 for students.

Prediction from Rep. Crane's office

Park district may get base

The Arlington Heights Park District could be getting title to 52 acres of the Nike Base within six weeks.

The prediction was made by the office of U. S. Rep. Philip M. Crane, R-12th, after Tuesday's announcement that the land, formerly held by the Navy for housing, had been declared surplus federal land.

Park district officials greeted the announcement with enthusiasm. Some of those officials said they were now looking forward to gaining title to the remaining 75 acres at the base.

The base, at Wilke and Central roads, was going to be used for Naval housing, a plan that was withdrawn in the face of concerted local and legislative opposition. The base, itself, lost its "mission" earlier this year when funding for the Nike-Hercules missile program was cut from the federal budget.

Charles Cronin, park board president, said of the General Service Administration's announcement: "We feel it is tantamount to having the deed turned over to us. Naturally, we are delighted."

THOMAS THORNTON, park director, said, "I've said all along we would be getting the 52 Navy acres. There was no question about it in my mind."

Looking at the remaining 75 acres, he said, "There's a question mark on the other land. But, there's a good possibility that we'll get it."

Kay Muller, park district vice president, said, "Once we get over one hurdle, we start looking toward the next," meaning the remaining Army land.

The 52 acres were turned over to the Defense Department after the Navy decided not to build housing. The land was offered to other branches of the military before it was given to the GSA, which in turn polled other federal agencies.

WHEN NO OTHER federal agencies demonstrated a need for the land, the GSA made its announcement that the land was in surplus of federal needs. The land will next be offered to the state, although it is unlikely the state will put in a bid for it.

Crane's spokesman said the park district has made its desire for the land well known and doubted any other governmental bodies would ask for it.

After the office surplus declaration, the park district as well as other governmental bodies, have 20 days in which to make application for the land through the Bureau of Outdoor Recreation.

Crane's spokesman said the announcement of the disposition of the land should be made shortly after the 20-day period.

"There is, of course, the standard red tape and paper work that has to be done. The announcement should be made in a month to six weeks," the spokesman said.

THE PARK DISTRICT plans to build a $1 million golf course on the Nike site. The parks already have gained title to 13 acres of the base.

The Army has said there are plans for the remaining 75 acres once the Nike-Hercules system is deactivated. The plans have not been made public yet.

At one point, the Army had asked the GSA to delay its decision on the Navy land, saying the site could be used for localized Army Reserve training centers. However, no formal presentation was ever made and the GSA went ahead with the surplus procedure.

Three parking meters stolen

Three parking meters were reported stolen over the weekend from the commuter parking lot across the street from the Arlington Heights Village Hall.

Police said the entire fixture, including the post, were discovered missing Monday morning by a police cadet checking for meter violations.

The meters were valued at $77 each.

Hardy, Holzman and Pfeiffer were dropped from consideration as architects for the proposed Arlington Heights cultural center, the village cultural commission announced Tuesday night.

The Houston-based firm of Caudill, Rowlett and Scott replaced Hardy, Holzman of New York in the list of four firms still in the running to implement the $3 million multi-use center for the arts to be built just south of the Arlington Heights Memorial Library.

Commission chairman Sidney Rosenfeld said Hardy, Holzman was dropped because of less than favorable reports on the firm's recent experiences with two theaters. He said the distance from Arlington Heights and uncertainty on architectural control of construction also contributed to the decision to replace them.

REPRESENTATIVES OF CRS and Loeb, Schlossman, Bennett and Dart made second presentations to the commission to choose the firm from the four companies still being considered.

John Schlossman said Arlington Heights is proposing a "challenging" center in concept, size, location, design and function.

The village cultural center will be located on a small site surrounded by low-profile buildings. The commission is attempting to incorporate radical designs, put forward by (theater consultant) George C. Izenour, for an auditorium that expands from 500 seats for small presentations up to 1,800 seats for full productions. The construction budget for the center, which will also house the Countryside Art Center, is about $3 million to be raised through private funds, solicited with help of the architects models and drawings.

Schlossman said several of his firm's projects, such as St. Procopius Abbey in Lisle, Ill., and the Northwest University Theater Center, have been done on small budgets without sacrificing functions or pleasing structures. He said the use of exposed interior construction materials were not costly and could be incorporated into the design attractively.

SCHLOSSMAN SAID he had not worked with Izenour before. He said the costs could be cut by minimizing Izenour's plans for mechanized dividing walls and fold-away seats.

He said his company would have to be part of a "team" with the theater consultant and have the right to question decisions and have ideas incorporated.

He said his firm could deliver the drawings and plans necessary to be used in fund raising for about $24,000. He, however, termed this a "wild figure."

Wally Scott of CRS, said his company would provide a team comprised of representatives of his company and a local construction firm that would design the center through the active participation of the local commission.

Scott said his company has worked with Izenour on theaters in the past. Two of these collaborations were the Jones Center, Houston, and the Akron Ohio Center for the Arts.

ROSENFELD questioned CRS' ability to stick with a budget. He said the Akron Center was budgeted for $8 million and had a final price tag of almost $12 million.

Scott said the timing of the construction and letting of bids for the project came just as inflation in the building field starting taking enormous leaps.

Scott said they would be able to stay with the budget and estimated their fees for the plans and drawings at about $23,000. He emphasized this was a rough figure.

Homemade bomb case continued until May 7

The court case against John Kerry Nichols for illegal possession of explosives has been continued until May 7.

Nichols was charged last week by Arlington Heights police after a homemade bomb exploded in his backyard, seriously injuring a friend, Mark A. Pearson of Hoffman Estates.

Nichols had been released earlier from Cook County Jail where he had been held in lieu of $10,000 bond.

Police allegedly discovered a bomb factory in Nichols' basement after the explosion. Several pounds of black powder and 12 completed bombs, including anti-personnel types, were reportedly found in the basement.

Pearson was transferred to a veteran's hospital in Chicago from Northwest Community Hospital where he had been taken after the blast. He received serious wounds to his head, face, arms and legs from the exploding pipe bomb.

So far, police have been unable to learn what Nichols was planning to do with the bombs he reportedly had constructed. Agents from the FBI as well as the Firearms, Alcohol and Tax division of the U.S. Treasury Department are aiding in the investigation. The bomb squad of the Chicago police department are studying the devices.

Pearson has not been charged by police.

France's Pompidou is dead

PARIS (UPI) — Georges Pompidou, who inherited from Gen. Charles de Gaulle the presidency of France and a determination to recreate the country's glory, died Tuesday of an undisclosed ailment. He was 62.

For many months, Pompidou's health had been of concern to Frenchmen. He himself had declared, however, "My health is my affair."

Unofficially, French spokesmen attributed the puffiness of Pompidou's face to cortisone which he took to relieve painful arthritis. Others, however, speculated that he suffered from multiple myeloma, a disease of the bone marrow. Cortisone also is used for this disease.

A medical bulletin signed by Prof. Jean Vignatou, presidential physician, said "President Pompidou died today April 2." No official cause of death was immediately given.

President Nixon praised Pompidou as "a man of vision, constraint, consistency and enormous strength of character. He came from the Auvergne, the heart of France, and he reflected all the spirit of the French people," Nixon said.

In Jerusalem, Prime Minister Golda Meir's government said Israel "joins in the mourning of the French people." In Cairo, Egyptian President Anwar Sadat said he received the news "with great pain and extreme sorrow."

Pompidou died at his private residence on Quai de Beethune in the shadow of the Notre Dame cathedral. All lights were put out in the apartment where heavy curtains were drawn and a lone policeman beat the sidewalk in front of the stonewall mansion.

Immediately upon the announcement of the death, officials informed Alain Poper, 64, president of the senate, that he would be interim president under the constitution until the election of a new chief executive. Poper served in a similar capacity in 1969 when de Gaulle resigned.

The larger tricolor flag on the Elysee palace was hauled down, and radio stations played mournful music.

The first persons to be informed were Premier Pierre Messmer and Foreign Minister Michel Jobert. Officials said Messmer immediately took over the duties of supreme commander of the armed forces and guardian of the key to France's nuclear force developed by de Gaulle.

Pompidou's death left the Gaullist coalition without an heir apparent to the presidency. It also came politically at a crucial time in France, two days before the scheduled opening of the National Assembly session where the ruling Gaullists faced a major challenge from the Socialist and Communist opposition on the government's economic policies.

FRENCH PRESIDENT Georges Pompidou, right, is dead. Pompidou, in one of his last public appearances — here with M. Klaus Scholtz, the new ambassador to France from East Germany — is bloated, but all smiles.

Donald Nixon tells his Vesco role

WASHINGTON (UPI) — In Watergate-related developments Tuesday:

• President Nixon's brother testified that a lawyer for financier Robert L. Vesco asked him to warn the President in 1972 that Vesco's secret $200,000 campaign contribution might be exposed.

• Confessed political saboteur Donald Segretti testified he distributed phony letters in 1972 accusing Democratic presidential hopefuls Henry Jackson, Hubert Humphrey and Shirley Chisholm of sexual misconduct or mental problems.

• Watergate prosecutors said they have not received "all relevant material" from President Nixon as the White House claims, and will issue further subpoenas if they must to get needed evidence.

F. Donald Nixon Sr., 59, was the first member of Nixon's family to testify in any of the current trials or investigations of alleged wrongdoing by Nixon Administration officials.

He said he refused to transmit the warning to his brother but suggested the Vesco lawyer get in touch with former Attorney General John N. Mitchell.

"I said there is no way I can do this," Donald Nixon told the federal court conspiracy trial of Mitchell and former Commerce Secretary Maurice H. Stans. "It's been my policy ever since my brother has been in politics never to use that office for any purpose of mine or anyone I work for."

A federal jury heard Segretti testify he sent to Dwight L. Chapin, Nixon's former appointments secretary on trial for lying to a Watergate grand jury, copies of virtually everything involved in his dirty tricks campaign against the Democrats.

He acknowledged distribution of the bogus letters, which charged, among other things, that Sen. Jackson had fathered an illegitimate child when he was in high school; that Sen. Humphrey was involved in an auto crash with a "known call girl" in his car; and that Mrs. Chisholm, a congresswoman from New York, had been confined in a mental institution in 1951 and 1952.

"No sir, none of those facts are true," Segretti told chief government prosecutor Richard Davis when asked about the charges in the letters.

Segretti was the first witness in the trial. Chapin was indicted for lying in telling the grand jury he knew nothing about Segretti's activities.

Meanwhile, within hours after White House spokesmen told reporters that President Nixon had turned over "all relevant material" to Watergate prosecutors, the prosecutor's office issued a strongly-worded statement declaring "a number" of requests for evidence still are outstanding.

"If there is noncompliance," the statement read, "subpoenas will be issued in accordance with the agreement between the President and the special prosecutor that such matters should be submitted to the court."

Queen Elizabeth 2: at least she floats

NEW YORK (UPI) — The Queen Elizabeth 2, second largest luxury liner in the world and probably first in misfortune, gave up trying to start its engines far out in the Atlantic Tuesday and told its 1,630 passengers they would be transferred to another ship.

Ignominiously adrift 270 miles southwest of Bermuda since early Monday, the Queen's boiler failure was the latest indignity in a long string of bomb hoaxes, slowaways, late sailings and hijack scares which have plagued the pride of Cunard Steamship Line Ltd. since she was launched in 1967.

The 963-foot liner was in no danger but unable to move under her own power since her three boilers conked out, hours

Nixon tax report due today

WASHINGTON (UPI) — House Republican Leader John J. Rhodes said Tuesday White House lawyers should have the opportunity to question the congressional committee which is scheduled to issue its report on President Nixon's income taxes.

The report, which some congressional leaders believe could cause the President more trouble than the Watergate scandal, is scheduled to be released today.

However, there is disagreement between the two ranking members of the Joint Congressional Economic Committee on whether details of the President's tax report should be made public at this time.

Rhodes argued that the American tradition "allows any person the time and opportunity to defend himself before any tribunal."

Emergency power was used to operate some lights and air conditioning as the passengers awaited the rescue ship.

Cunard said fares of at least $1 million would be refunded.

Two tug boats were sent to tow the 65,863-ton liner to Bermuda if the boilers cannot be repaired. Cunard said there was a chance at least one of the huge boilers might be put into service, allowing the Queen to limp into port.

Availability of gasoline is up

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Gasoline availability continued its upward trend of the past four weeks, the American Automobile Association said Tuesday.

Spot checks with 6,238 service stations in all states but Alaska showed generally improving conditions everywhere.

But "out of fuel" signs at service stations increased to 5 per cent nationwide from 3 per cent one week ago, the AAA said.

"However, this week's survey reveals that fewer stations are limiting amounts customers may purchase in a single stop at the pumps; more stations are open Sundays and after noon on Saturdays; a greater percentage of stations are pumping fuel after 7 p.m. weekdays; and fewer stations are closed by noon on weekdays," the organization said.

The AAA said the best overall fuel conditions in the country appear to be in the mountain states.

Offer new U.S. insurance plan

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., and Rep. Wilbur D. Mills, D-Ark., proposed Tuesday a sweeping national health insurance plan to cover every American against medical costs regardless of their income or their need.

The bill, described by Mills as a "compilation" of the many different health bills offered this year, is similar to a health bill sponsored by the administration and is a significant rollback from a broader, more expensive measure proposed earlier by Kennedy.

Kennedy and Mills estimated the total cost of their program at about $40 billion annually, about $8 billion of which represents additional costs above present spending but about the same as President Nixon's health proposals.

The plan would pay for hospital services with no limit on the amount or the length of coverage; for physicians' services in the home or elsewhere with no dollar limit; and for other medical services subject to an annual deductible of $150.

Message: Hearst release to be revealed

• A breakthrough in the Patricia Hearst kidnapping case appeared certain yesterday as a message from the Symbionese Liberation Army was delivered to a bi-weekly underground newspaper, The Phoenix. The message said the time and place of her release would be revealed in 72 hours. The message arrived at about the time the Hearst Corp. was revealing that $4 million in escrow for continuation of the Hearst food ransom program would be withdrawn if Patricia was not released in 30 days. . . . Despite rumors in Mexico that an official of the U. S. consulate in Hermosillo might have connived in his own disappearance, a State Department spokesman said "we are operating on the presumption" that John Patterson — who disappeared March 22 — was abducted. . . . In Argentina, businessman Carlos Sosa — the 18th person kidnapped in the country this year — was found shot to death the day after his family paid half the $100,000 ransom demanded by his abductors.

• Spiro Agnew was elsewhere Tuesday, as defense attorneys fought to keep his license to practice law in arguments before Maryland's Court of Appeals. The state bar association repeated its call for disbarment on grounds that the former vice president violated his public trust, while his lawyers appealed for only temporary suspension. A decision is expected in about three weeks.

Gen. Omar Bradley

• Admitted to the Louisiana bar in 1937 even though he had no law degree, and named the nation's outstanding attorney general in 1963, Jack P. F. Gernillion had another significant day Tuesday. He was released from federal prison at Eglin Air Force Base, Fla., after serving 15 months on a perjury conviction involving his role with a scandal-ridden financial institution.

• Considered one of America's most influential and powerful Roman Catholics, Lawrence Cardinal Shehan, 75, resigned Tuesday as head of the Baltimore archdiocese. Often controversial, he pushed the idea that the church had to be involved in politics and social issues, desegregated the city's Catholic school system, helped open a city park to blacks, took part in anti-war and civil rights demonstrations and addressed the congregations of other faiths.

• Remember Bob Kennedy, the 18-year-old Cicero youth who left March 8 on a 4,000 mile hike to Fairbanks to raise money for the poor? He's now in Minneapolis, reporting sore feet but determination to go on.

• One-liner: the new priest at Kettlestone parish church in Norfolk, England, is the Rev. Keith Pagan.

Mortgages require flood insurance

The purchase of federally subsidized flood insurance has become a requirement for mortgage loans in some areas of the Northwest suburbs under a federal regulation that went into effect on March 2.

The insurance, available from most local insurance agents, must now be bought by owners of homes that lie in "special flood hazard areas" before those homes can be mortgaged by federally regulated banks and savings and loan associations.

Maps outlining special flood hazard areas, as defined by the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development, have been prepared for Arlington Heights, Des Plaines, Elk Grove Village, Mount Prospect, Palatine, Rolling Meadows and Wheeling.

Maps for Buffalo Grove, Hoffman Estates and Schaumburg are being prepared and should be available by July.

In addition, more detailed hydrological studies of the 10 communities are planned to upgrade the current maps.

Hydrological study maps are already completed for Des Plaines and for Palatine.

THE NEW requirement necessitates purchase of the insurance for any new loan or modification of an existing loan on property designated as part of the special flood hazard area on the maps.

The requirement for purchase of the insurance applies not only to federally-insured loans, but also to conventional financing according to Paul Downing, a senior vice president and secretary of Uptown Federal Savings and Loan Assn. of Chicago.

Downing explained the new requirement means a financial institution cannot grant a loan unless the insurance is purchased by the homeowner.

Copies of the maps delineating areas of local communities where the mortgage flood insurance requirement is in effect may be seen at local lending institutions or copies can be obtained by contacting State Farm Insurance Co. of Bloomington, Ill.

IN ADDITION to the residents buying the flood insurance because of the new mortgage requirement, an increasing number of Northwest suburbanites are also buying the insurance just for their own protection.

As of December, 1973 a total of 3,500 policies had been sold throughout Illinois, according to Ann Duker of the Illinois Department of Local Governmental Affairs.

Totals as of that date for local communities included 233 policies sold in Arlington Heights, 13 in Buffalo Grove, 58 in Des Plaines, 17 in Elk Grove Village, 14 in Hoffman Estates, 92 in Mount Prospect, 99 in Palatine, 14 in Schaumburg, 13 in Rolling Meadows and 26 in Wheeling.

HOWEVER, THE state total for policies sold had risen to 6,800 at the end of March, Mrs. Duker said, indicating that local totals may be higher now.

Mrs. Duker explained that discrepancies in current maps which exclude many flood prone areas from the mortgage requirement will be corrected as more detailed maps are made for each community. The current maps are based on information from the U.S. Soil Conservation Service and on U.S. Geological Survey flood plain maps, she said.

Cost for the flood insurance under the federally subsidized program is a flat annual rate of 25 cents for each $100 of coverage on property damage and 35 cents for each $100 coverage on home contents.

Total cost at maximum coverage would be $122.50.

IN SOME communities, including only the Village of Palatine locally, additional insurance on both the structure of the home and the contents can be purchased. Rates for additional insurance in Palatine are 35 cents per $100 coverage on the structure and 45 cents per $100 coverage on the contents.

Each policy has a $200 deductible clause (or 2 per cent of the amount of loss, whichever is greater) that applies to both building and contents coverage.

Federal flood insurance is also available for multiple-family residential developments, businesses, municipal buildings, churches, hotels and motels.

Silver, green signs to show bicycle routes

Silver and green signs are being installed this week to designate the official bike route in Arlington Heights.

The bike route is located in the central part of the village — between Rand Road and Northwest Highway. The signs will all be posted in 10 days to two weeks, said Gene Rillroth of the village's public works department.

Approved by village officials last August, the bike route was established in hopes of making the public aware of bicycle activity and bicycle safety.

The signs are estimated to cost about $2,500.

The route is included in the third annual village historical bike tour scheduled for May 18.

Stops will be made at sites of historical interest along the 6-mile bike tour. Local girl Scouts will act as information guides and local cycling clubs will supply marshals for the event.

A rain date of May 25 has been set.

SILVER AND GREEN signs will designate the official Arlington Heights bike path. Located in the central part of the village, the route will be included in the May 18 bike ride.

Erviti gets 'compromise' pay raise

by BOB GALLAS

The Dist. 59 Board of Education, in what is believed to be a compromise gesture, has given all administrators a 5 per cent raise effective July 1. The raise was approved despite a call from parents and present and future board members to table any action on Supt. James Erviti's contract until a controversy between Erviti and district principals is worked out.

The announcement of the pay hike followed a three-hour executive session of the board during which Erviti's contract was apparently discussed.

The superintendent receives a yearly contract review by the board. According to sources some board members were pushing this year to extend Erviti's contract one year and give him an 8 per cent pay raise. Apparently pressure from other board members, who wanted to freeze all administrative salaries until the principals-Erviti conflict is worked out, made the compromise necessary.

Prior to their lengthy closed-door session, which went past 3 a.m. yesterday, board members heard sharp criticism of Erviti from some of the 150 parents, teachers and principals who attended the session. Criticism was also leveled at the board, which many felt should get involved in settling the dispute immediately.

THE BOARD has officially maintained its policy is to stay informed, but not involved, until members are sure the problem cannot be worked out by Erviti and his principals.

In a letter to Erviti more than a month ago, the principals listed the concerns which included the superintendent's "demeaning" treatment of principals, the district's budget development practice and the "single-text approach" principals said seems to be the direction of the district.

The principals asked that a series of meetings be held to work out the differences.

The principals, many of whom indicated that the meetings were producing "little success," called for a renewed effort in working out the problems in a statement issued at Monday night's board meeting.

Since the principals' conflict with the administration was revealed by The Herald last week, support for them has come in from all directions including the Dist. 59 Teachers' Council, numerous parent groups and individuals.

Board members Judy Zanca and outgoing member Irwin Poklaski, called for the raises to be tabled but they were voted down, 5 to 2.

THE 5 PER CENT raise applies to principals, assistant principals, the director of pupil personnel, assistant superintendents, and Erviti. The motion for the raises also included a provision which called for all salaries to be reviewed again Sept. 15, at which time additional raises might be given retroactive to July 1.

Erviti presently receives $34,182 plus a host of fringe benefits. His increase will bring him up to $35,891. Last year the board voted him an 8 per cent pay raise in the midst of another controversy and rumored attempts by some on the board to dump him. His contract runs through July, 1976.

THE MEETING was the last for two board members, President Allen Sparks and Poklaski. Two new board members, Paul Kucharski and Avis Wold, are running for the board unopposed and will presumably take office at the next board meeting.

The majority of those at the meeting asked that the board intervene for a quick resolution of the problem between principals and Erviti. Some either in person or through letters read at the meeting, demanded Erviti's immediate dismissal.

A parent's charge that Erviti "has not been sensitive to our desires as taxpayers," brought a round of applause from the obviously partisan audience.

Another women stood to add that "most of us are here because we've been run roughshod over by Dr. Erviti."

THROUGHOUT THE attacks Erviti sat silent, appeared unaffected, and did not comment on anything that was said. Erviti returned from a one-week vacation Monday and, at that time, told The Herald he would not comment on the conflict as he considered it an "administrative matter."

The parents' comments fairly well summed up the overall comments of those who spoke out at the meeting. Their concern wasn't with the budget development practice in the district or the "single text approach" — but dealt solely with Erviti.

It's possible the feeling of the board in the dispute might change noticeably at its next meeting, April 15, when both new board members take office. Both have called for board involvement to settle the matter quickly.
